'Hog straddlers' after MLAs

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Members of the Bounty Hunter motorycle club in Victoria are going to fight the compulsory helmet law that will be coming into effect within the next few days.

The Harley-Davidson "hog" straddlers decided at a meeting Wednesday night to start a letter-writing campaign to their MLAs to get help in changing the law.

Spokesman Pete Gosvig, 28, said the group wants to use legitimate means to try to pressure the government into giving experienced riders the choice of wearing a helmet.

"We want to try to get public opinion behind us," he said.

However, if those efforts fail, there are rumblings of tougher action.

There is talk of a possible protest ride to the Legislative Buildings involving as many as 200 bikers from the Island and Lower Mainland.

And Gosvig said some thought is being given to defying the law by not wearing helmets.

"We could clutter up the court with charges, just to show how ridiculous the law is," he said.

For the past three weeks, the group has been circulating a petition which they intend to present to Premier Bill Bennett.

The petition asks the government to amend the helmet regulation so that only riders under the age of 19 or with less than two years motorcycle riding experience will have to wear an approved safety helmet.

Club members say they have close to 2,000 signatures and claim support has come from some unexpected quarters including a retired policeman, as well as lawyers, doctors and paramedics.

A regulation requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets was quashed last week by Burnaby provincial court Judge Selywn Romilly who ruled the law was invalid because the province failed to set its own standards for approved helmets.

Since then a new regulation has been drafted and

$7.5 billion drain for U.K. investors

LONDON (CP) — British investors lost a total of more than £3 billion ($7.5 billion) in two days as share prices continued to slide today in the wake of the new Conservative government's controversial budget.

The budget reduced personal income taxes but pushed up sales taxes and interest rates and the government acknowledged that inflation, currently about 10 per cent, may shoot up to an annual rate of 17 per cent later this year.

Unions, worried about higher costs, have warned they will seek sharply higher wages in their next round of demands. Scottish miners said they will seek a minimum wag of £140 ($350) a week, a boost of about 60 per cent over their current rate.

No hospital budget cut insists McClelland

Health Minister Bob McClelland reiterated Wednesday that there have been no cuts in hospital budgets and none is intended.

McClelland made the claim Wednesday after NDP MLAs delivered scathing criticism of current hospital funding.

Urged by Gordon Hanson (NDP—Victoria) to drop the five-per-cent ceiling imposed by the government on hospital budget increases, McClelland said "there is no five-per-cent ceiling and there never has been."

McClelland said hospitals now are getting more money than ever before.

However, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe made reference last January to a five-per-cent ceiling on hospital budgets while announcing a government program for the control of local property taxes.

Hospital workers at Victoria's Glengarry hospital and at Burnaby General hospital have taken action this week to protest what they claim are budget cuts.

Hanson said staff at Glengarry walked off the job Tuesday complaining about inadequate food, unsanitary kitchen conditions and a lack of nurses.

He said hospital administrator Jack Howard had stated he was having difficulty getting supplies and staff had been reduced by six or seven because of government cuts.

McClelland said the government has allocated an extra $25 million for hospitals for wages, supplies and services.

Staff members of Burnaby General Hospital spent their lunch hour Wednesday picketing the hospital's admissions entrance protesting recent cuts they said resulted in layoffs and curtailment of new programs.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), the former health minister, said the situation was "the ultimate irony."

"The minister said today there are no problems, no cutbacks, and yet every hospital in the province — with a few exceptions — is having the same kind of trouble that they are having at Burnaby General."

Desperate Managua looters hunt food

Times News Services

MANAGUA — Thousands of desperate Nicaraguans have begun looting long-closed stores here, dodging bullets while trying to balance huge loads of stolen goods.

As word of break-ins spread, slum residents ran toward stores and shopping centres in middle-class areas, scrambling barefoot over piles of broken window glass to fill boxes and bags.

Commerce has totally shut down in the city, as a three-week-old strike has given way to widespread street battles.

Even those with money can no longer buy food.

With the battle for Managua still intense, the U.S. Air Force flew out two more planeloads of U.S. citizens Wednesday — about 150 persons mostly women and children — to the Panama Canal Zone for transfer to commercial flights home.

Heavy fighting was again reported in the northern part of the country, where Sandinista guerrillas control several cities and a number of small villages while the National Guard concentrates its main effort in Managua.

President Anastasio Somoza,meanwhile, told a U.S. television interviewer the fighting and looting were "only in certain parts of the city, but the country in general terms is at peace."

Somoza said his troops now control the west, north and south of the city and are mopping up guerrilla strongholds in the east alongside the airport road.

As battles in widespread areas of the city continued, the National Guard regained some territory and lost some won the day before. Tuesday, about half of the five-mile highway to the international airport was clear of rebel barricades.

Wednesday, while the airport itself apparently remains untouched — and a flight from Miami landed — the tenacious guerrillas reconstructed barriers.

Despite the fact that many people in the slums talk about rebel-controlled areas as "liberated zones" or "peoples' areas," the Sandinistas can be ruthless with some local residents.

Wednesday morning, a sobbing man ran into the Intercontinental Hotel with five small, dirty children. He said he was a teacher from a nearby barrio who the guerrillas had branded an "oreja," — the Spanish word for ear that, in local vernacular, means government spy.

The man said the rebels had posted his picture on street corners, burned down his office and issued orders for his death.

Plea on beer from Mitchell

If smokers have a friend in Don Lockstead, then beer drinkers have a buddy in Frank Mitchell.

Lockstead, the chain-smoking NDP MLA from Mackenzie was the sole member who opposed an increased tax on tobacco last year.

And Mitchell, the newly elected NDP MLA for Esquimalt-Port Renfrew made a plea on behalf of beer drinkers in the legislature Wednesday.

Mitchell objects to the fact that the three-year-old sales tax rate of seven per cent still applies to alcohol. Everything else is assessed at four per cent.

"Beer is the working man's beverage," he told the house, adding if the legislature can't see its way clear to cut the tax on all liquor products, it should at least consider beer.

Mitchell said that as a policeman, he is aware of the dangers of abuse of alcohol, but he said it is also time to stop considering alcohol an evil.

That view was expressed by old Labor MLA Tom Uphill (Fernie), his seat-mate, when he was first elected to the house in 1951, Mitchell said.

Troops help trucks along

Times News Services

Troops and highway patrolmen protected truck convoys moving in violence-torn Alabama today despite the independent truckers' protest.

But the independents shut down fuel depots in three southern states, drying up gas supplies and forcing officials to seek court orders to end the blockades.

The week-old slowdown disrupted commerce in at least 29 of the 50 states.

Scores of truckers were arrested on various changes as convoys snarled traffic in at least six states. Numerous truck stops were blockaded from New England to Oregon. Some Canadian truckers entering U.S. trouble spots were also blockaded and their tires shot out.

The demonstrations escalated this week after the Independent Truckers Association urged all 100,000 U.S. owner-operators to join in a protest to demand guaranteed fuel allocations, standardized weight and load regulations and an increase in the speed limit to 104 km/h.

And state leaders attending the western governors' conference in Sun Valley, Idaho — facing the possible loss of valuable farm produce as a result of the truckers' shutdown — urged the Interstate Commerce Commission on Wednesday to allow rate increases for merchandise hauled by the independents.

"We want to get this over with as quick as possible," said Bill Scheffer of Breezewood, Pa., national vice-president o the Independent Truckers Association. "It's either a slow death or a fast one and we'd just as soon get it over with."

The truckers received added support Wednesday from the National Association of Truck Stop Operators, representing 1,100 truckstops, many of which have been blockaded or closed voluntarily.

William Maebert, incoming chairman of the association and owner of a truck stop in St. Augustine, Fla., called on Transportation Secretary Brock Adams to become "actively and vocally involved" in seeking solutions to the diesel fuel problems.

The protesting truckers want guaranteed diesel fuel allocations and a decrease in prices they say have reached as high as $1.29 a gallon in some areas. The U.S. gallon is about four-fifths of a Canadian.

Indefinite probation for shots in arena

TERRACE (CP) — A 15-year-old Terrace boy was placed on indefinite probation Tuesday for firing four rifle shots at Prince Rupert hockey players following a brawl Jan. 6.

The juvenile, who pleaded guilty to possession of a firearm dangerous to the public, was ordered to perform 200 hours of community work and to stay off arena property.

Judge Darrell Collins also prohibited the juvenile from possessing a firearm, ammunition or explosives for two years.

No one was injured in the shooting which happened outside the arena. The juvenile fired at a van filled with the 16- to 18-year-old Prince Rupert players.

Earlier, during the game which was won by Prince Rupert, several off-duty RCMP officers were needed to break up a brawl which broke out between the Prince Rupert team and some of the Terrace fans. There were no injuries in the brawl.

AEC chief blasts 'horror stories'

TORONTO (CP) — The nuclear industry, on the defensive in recent months because of criticism about the safety of nuclear energy, sprang back this week with a vigorous campaign to tell its side of the story.

Jon Jennekens, chairman of the Atomic Energy Control Board, addressing 700 members of the Canadian Nuclear Association, blasted the media saying they had created horror stories about the nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania.

He said the news media alarmed millions of people "with nuclear horror stories based on misinformation and misunderstanding."

Although Jennekens said the media faced difficulty in acquiring accurate information, "much of the coverage which ensued went well beyond the bounds of objectivity and credibility."

The conference, given the theme title The International Challenge began less than 10 days after thousands of anti-nuclear demonstrators around the world marched on nuclear power plant sites protesting against atomic energy.

A demonstration at the Darlington nuclear generating site about 70 kilometres east of Toronto drew more than 1,000 protesters.

Bob Taylor, chairman of Ontario Hydro, said the greatest challenge facing the nuclear industry was to convince society that nuclear power is still a safe and environmentally rational form of energy.

"To dispel the fears of an anxious public, irrational as they may at times seem to us, is no mean feat and our success will be measured by the degree which we can convince that public that they no longer ask questions that begin with the two words 'what if.' "

Ontario Premier William Davis told an association dinner audience that his government would remain firm in its commitment to nuclear power, which he called an efficient and safe industry.

He said nuclear station employees are safer at work than they are in their own homes.

"Indeed on the basis of current evidence it would be difficult to find another industrial workplace as safe in today's world."

His statement came about two weeks after a report was made public explaining how two employees of the Bruce nuclear plant received overdoses of radiation from an April 28 accident.

The plant is about 145 kilometres northwest of London, Ont. The report also listed several violations of safety truck stops were blockaded Wednesday, the last three gallons at a Toltec station went into the tank of an 18-wheeler driven by independent trucker Martin Holmes, 23, of Jackson, Mich., who was hauling lettuce from Salinas, Calif., and is due in Atlanta today.

"The worst thing I'm worried about is getting home," said Holmes, who reported he saw a number of truck windshields smashed by golfballs and bricks in California. "They say it's really going to get bad on Friday. That's word of mouth and you can believe about one-third of it.

"But there are a bunch of lunatics running around."

Meanwhile, the diesel shortage has forced southbound Alberta truckers to find ways to keep their vehicles moving, including welding extra fuel tanks to their rigs.

Figol Distributors Ltd. of Edmonton has managed to get a National Energy Board permit to export up to 211,000 U.S. gallons of diesel fuel to the U.S. for use in Figol trucks.

The permit, which is valid until Sept. 30, allows Figol to stockpile the fuel in Great Falls, Mont. It cannot be sold to other carriers and its disbursement to Figol trucks must be carefully documented.

"This won't eliminate all our problems but it will certainly alleviate them," Figol said in a telephone interview. "And it will keep the exports from Alberta going."

Figol runs a fleet of 12 to 22 trucks between Alberta and California, hauling various food products from the U.S. and returning with peat moss and meat from Alberta.

Immigration minister to boost Viet quotas

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Ron Atkey says he wants to significantly increase the 1979 quota of 5,000 Vietnamese and other refugees from Southeast Asia set by the former Liberal government.

Atkey said in an interview Wednesday he has asked the provincial governments in a telex to state their positions on the possibility of Canada allowing more refugees from Indo-China into the country this year.

He has proposed that a reserve of 2,000 out of a total 10,000-refugee intake this year that was not designated to any region of the world, be designated to Vietnamese. And he is willing to further increase that total by a number he has not yet decided on.

That would bring the government-sponsored total to 7,000 in addition to the hundreds that are being allowed in through sponsorship by individuals, church groups and other organizations.

He also said Canada should be speaking out more often against human rights violations in Vietnam, particularly against what he called genocide of the ethnic Chinese.

"As the facts come to my attention, it pricks my conscience as a human being," he said.

The matter is going to be a high priority for the new Conservative government, he said.

About 3,600 of the 5,000 refugees from Southeast Asia to be allowed in this year have already arrived in Canada.

Most of them have come from Thailand where they fled, often by boat, from Vietnam.

Bikers rev up helmet protest once it appears in the B.C. Gazette, due to be published either Friday or next Monday, will become law.

The intervening period has given the hog riders a taste of the helmet-less freedom they enjoyed until 1972 when the regulation first came into effect in the province.

The hard-core bikers say they have never been happy with the law.

They say helmets impair both hearing and vision and they feel they offer little protection at speeds greater than 17 miles an hour. The bikers claim there is a greater chance of injuring the lower part of the body than the head in cycle mishaps.

Club member Eddie Eng, 31, says the law is an infringement on personal rights and freedoms.

"We don't like being dictated to as if we were some kind of child," he said.

Independent biker Ken Patterson agrees.

"It's like saying you have to wear a life-jacket when you go out swimming in case you might drown," he said.

Patterson noted more than half the states south of the border have repealed helmet legislation.

"I don't think the danger is as big as some would lead you to believe," he said. "In 1975, the most recent figures available, 534 people were killed in motorcycle accidents in Canada. In the same year more than double that number died in accidental poisonings."

Alert Bay girl's death sparks medical review

Representatives from four provincial medical associations have joined with ministry of health officials to review medical services in the Alert Bay area.

The medical review committee whose investigations will be public is composed of members of the B.C. Hospitals Association, the B.C. Medical Association, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., as well as members of the ministry.

Requests for a review of the medical situation on Cormorant Island came as early as last February, a spokesman for the ministry said today.

The committee's study is independent of one being conducted by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons into the qualificaitons of the area's lone doctor, Jack Pickup.

Evidence from an inquest into the death of an 11-year-old Indian girl revealed that Pickup has a serious drinking problem which many witnesses testified has impaired his ability to properly perform his duties.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Bob McClelland says he will release soon a report commissioned last year on doctor shortages in isolated areas of the province.

Headed by former health minister Wes Black, the study was completed earlier this year and a report sent to McClelland on March 30.

procedures, lack of essential equipment and poor training of employees involved in the accident.

However, Ernest Siddall, a nuclear engineer with Canatom Ltd. of Toronto, was greeted with enthusiastic applause when he told association members the money spent for excessive safety features on nuclear reactors should be transferred to other areas where more lives could be saved.

Throughout the conference, nuclear industry spokesmen repeatedly said the Three Mile Island accident, termed TMI, really meant "Too Much Imagination."

And Nick Ediger, association president, said the industry here would have to dispel the myths generated by the Harrisburg accident in March.

He accused officials of the United States nuclear regulatory commission of behaving irresponsibly for promoting the potentially explosive hydrogen bubble which formed inside the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor although it was later learned an explosion would not have taken place.

Ediger, also president of Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. of Ottawa, said the concept of meltdown — the possibility of an uncooled nuclear reactor core burning into the earth — was another myth promoted during the accident.

"The fact of the matter is that the defence-in-depth and containment design philosophy of nuclear power worked."

He said too little is known about radiation sources and their hazards to condemn the nuclear industry.

A pregnant pause for Lucy

CHICAGO (UPI) — Lucy of the Peanuts comic strip may be getting "bigger and better," but United Features Syndicate, the holder of the Peanuts copyright, doesn't think so.

United Features has filed suit in U.S. District Court charging a Chicago clothing distributor with causing "irreputable damage" to its copyright — and Lucy's character — by showing her pregnant in an ad to sell maternity clothes.

The suit charges Bernard Poticha with violating federal trademark and copyright laws as well as Illinois common law and unfair competition and deceptive practices regulations.

The ad shows a profile of the pregnant Lucy announcing the availability of summer and fall maternity clothes at Poticha's showroom at the Apparel Mart. Under Lucy's figure is the slogan, "She's getting bigger and better every year."

The suit says Lucy's portrayal in the ad is "degrading and offending and wholly repugnant to and tends to destroy the wholesome image" she has in the comic strip.

Lucy "has been consistently and continuously portrayed ... as a young, unmarried girl," the suit said.

United Features, which has held the copyright since 1950, is seeking an estimated $50,000 from Poticha for each violation of the copyright, cessation of further use of the ad, destruction of all ad reporductions and all profits he has made as a result of the ad.

Passion for Agatha, and her ideas

A Frenchman with a passion for Agatha Christie thrillers was jailed for 20 years for poisoning his octogenarian uncle with laced wine last Christmas Eve. Roland Roussel, 59, a mechanic, was sentenced Wednesday. The court was told a police search of his apartment found books on poison and a set of Agatha Christie novels, in one of which Roussel had underlined in red a passage describing a poisoned wine murder. Roussel gave his aunt and uncle, both in their 80s, a bottle of Cotes du Rhone containing a large dose of the drug Atropin about three months before Christmas. The couple opened the bottle on Christmas Eve. The uncle died that night but Roussel's aunt survived because she drank only a little of the spiked wine.

Meanwhile, still in a Christie vein, was it a case of Murder on the Links or just plain Evil Under the Sun? Dr. Sherman Thomas says the goose got in the way of his golf ball and was hurt — that he killed it to put it out of its misery. But witnesses have another story, and now Thomas says he wants a jury trial — in federal court. The 63-year-old Washington, D.C., physician was arraigned Wednesday in Baltimore on charges of killing a Canada goose out of season, illegal possession of a Canada goose and using an illegal hunting weapon — a golf club. Witnesses to the bird's demise May 3 on the 17th hole of the Congressional Country Club golf course say the goose honked, just as Thomas made a putt — that he chased it down and killed it in a rage.

Sculptor Barry Canterna has his own way of getting even with the New York cops he says beat him up in May 1978. He's immortalized the incident with a gigantic sculpture depicting eight club-wielding police officers — faces twisted in maniacal grins, one of them wearing a death's head — beating two helpless, handcuffed victims. The victims are Canterna and his brother, Kevin — hospitalized last year following a brawl in a Greenwich Village night spot. Canterna says his brother called police for protection when bouncers at the club assaulted them, only to have police jump in with boots and truncheons to finish the job. The sculpture is on display at Manhattan's Harkness House Gallery. The Canternas are in court — suing.

Also in court is a Kentucky radio executive who says it was his idea to combine the voices of Barbra Streisand and Neil Diamond on the song, You Don't Bring Me Flowers. He wants someone to bring him $5 million. Gary Guthrie, former program director for radio station WAKY in Louisville, Ky., accuses Columbia Records and CBS Inc. of breach of contract. Guthrie said he was working for WAKY when he got the idea of splicing separate versions of the song by Miss Streisand and Diamond into a duet. He said he made the duet version on or about May 21, 1978, and it became extremely popular in Louisville. Guthrie said he sent a copy of the tape in July to Freddy Pillot, a record promotions executive for CBS in Miami. In October 1978, the record company released a single version of the Streisand-Diamond tune, Guthrie said. The duet was repeated in two albums — Barbra Streisand's Greatest Hits, Volume II and Diamond's You Don't Bring Me Flowers. The suit says Columbia sold more than one million copies of the single and more than two million copies of the two albums. But Guthrie said he has received no payments.

And, finally, it was more than a trivia contest. It was a quest for the ultimate unanswerable question, and Dariush Saghafi of University Heights, Ohio, was the winner. His brain-twister for Omni magazine: "Why can't you tickle yourself?"

Postal bandits grab $1M

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Five masked gunmen held up a postal van at a post office loading dock, shot and killed a postman and escaped with about $1 million today, police sources said.

The attack happened as the postal van arrived at an uptown post office and two postmen started unloading bags containing cash for monthly payments to old age pensioners, the sources said.

The gunmen arrived in a gray Volkswagen van, which blocked the street. One gunman opened fire immediately on the postmen. One postman was able to escape inside the building but the second one was shot and died shortly afterward, they said.

The gunmen grabbed the money bags and escaped in a white Peugeot car that was parked nearby. Both the car and the robber's van had been stolen. The car was brand new, presumably stolen from a dealer, and was found abandoned a few blocks away later, police said.

Police and state troopers set up roadblocks on several motorways leading out of Brussels.

The chill in Brazil heats the coffee

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Recent cold weather in southern Brazil will result in a loss of more than nine million bags of coffee over two years and will keep world coffee prices high, the government said Wednesday.

Octavio Rainho, president of Brazil's federal coffee policy agency, announced the crop losses and said international coffee prices "will remain steady and high."

This year's Brazilian coffee harvest, which is about to be picked and marketed, will be around 19.5 million of the 132-pound bags instead of the forecast 21.3 million bags, Rainho said. Next year's crop, which was to have been around 26 million bags, will be about 19 million bags, the government said.

Democratic planning

The glare of publicity directed at that peculiar municipal agency, the advisory planning commission, during the Broadmead shopping centre controversy in Saanich has generated demands to bring democracy to the planning process.

The Broadmead plan has been rejected by Saanich's advisory planning commission, which was the principal goal of the influential Broadmead ratepayers' association. Saanich council may overrule the commission's advice, but in the past it has generally gone along with it. The ratepayers welcome the decision, but they still register important objections about the way it was reached.

The Broadmead fuss illustrates the considerable power and influence wielded by the advisory planning commission (APC for short). Every large city has such a body which advises elected officials on rezoning and planning matters. Operating procedures and membership vary (five council members sit on Victoria's 18-member APC; in Saanich, aldermen have no seats) but generally they contain a heavy sprinkling of professionals and they operate in private. Saanich's is an entirely appointed body which meets in camera and hears only from the developers and municipal planning staff.

Allegedly, this enables the supposedly apolitical commission to furnish impartial opinions unaffected by the political pressures felt by aldermen.

The problem which has catapulted the APC into hot water is that these days everything is political, especially major rezoning applications in the semi-rural parts of Saanich. The drawn-out Royal Oak industrial park controversy has shown that land use is the single key issue of modern municipal politics.

In such a climate, is civic democracy served by an agency with real power which denies citizen input and acts behind closed doors?

The Broadmead ratepayers answer with a definite negative. The present review process locks out the public at the important initial stages of consideration. If a development or rezoning application passes the APC hurdle, the municipal planning staff has delivered an opinion and positions have hardened. The next stage is a public hearing by council, but by this time the outcome is often a fait accompli. With the head start given the developer, citizen groups never catch up.

Anyone trying to generate serious public discussion of a major development before elected officials and the civic bureaucracy have made up their minds finds himself at a serious disadvantage.

Recent changes in the Municipal Act have taken away some of the power and flexibility of municipal councils in dealing with development applications. The old land use permits which allowed councils to exact considerable concessions as the price of granting a rezoning permit were abolished, and now rezoning requires only a simple majority vote instead of two-thirds support on council. Conversely, the influence of the unelected advisory planning commissions have increased.

It's time to open planning commission doors and allow citizens the opportunity to hear and discuss matters that affect them.

Amtrak: back on the rails

NEW YORK — Amtrak, threatened only a few weeks ago with emasculation, may be at least partially rescued by a combination of ridership gains forced by the energy crunch and vigorous rail buff lobbying. Not that the needed commitment has as yet been made to develop first class rail passenger service; but at least the administration's meat axe appears to have been stayed for a while.

Highways, not railways

And why not? With President Carter complaining daily that he cannot persuade the American people that the energy crisis is real, it would hardly make sense to cut in half what little rail passenger service the United States has. With every sign pointing to more, not less, restraint on private auto travel in the future, Amtrak needs to be strengthened, not truncated.

Yet, remarkably, the administration is proposing to shift money saved in rail passenger appropriations to highway funding, even as it prepared to slash Amtrak funds by about 19 per cent next year, a six per cent increase to $6.93 billion in highway construction money was requested.

Apparently for the main purpose of saving $1.4 billion over five years — about the cost of New York's proposed Westway for automobiles — the department of transportation sent congress a plan to lop off 12,000 miles (43 per cent) of Amtrak routes and some of its most popular trains.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams offered the argument that this rock-bottom system should be sustained in case energy shortages made it necessary someday to expand rail service; but in the meantime, he insisted, congress would not support a larger system that could not pay for itself.

Congress had 90 days to forbid the department to put the cuts into effect. The deadline came and went in late May without congressional action; but such are the vagaries of legislative procedure that planned appropriation and authorization amendments will apparently save some of what had been scheduled for the axe — for example, congressional sources believe, the Montrealer from Washington through New England to Canada, and one of two heavily travelled New York-to-Florida trains.

Although final amounts have not been agreed upon, a House committee is recommending substantially larger Amtrak appropriations than DOT requested; a Senate committee recommends more than DOT but less than the House. The route prunings still scheduled, moreover, will require up to two years to put into effect; depending on circumstances, some might yet be avoided.

When Amtrak was created in 1971, it had no employees, no tracks, no rolling stock, no stations, no nothing. congress gave it only $40 million for starters. While appropriations have grown, they have been decided annually, denying the possibility of long-range planning. No recent administration has believed in rail passenger service more than grudgingly; as a result Amtrak has been the redheaded stepchild of American transportation.

Yet, it has survived and grown, if not into a good service at least beyond most expectations. When gasoline shortages materialized this year, people began flocking back to trains. Advance bookings are up 90 per cent over last year. Trains leaving Chicago for the west coast are now fully booked and last winter over 70,000 callers were unable to make reservations on New York-Florida trains.

As a result, and because of assiduous lobbying by rail service supporters, congress may be somewhat more in the mood to concede at least some value to Amtrak. The Senate recommended, for example, $3 million and the House $18 million more than DOT for assisting states that want to pay for additional Amtrak service; and the House recommended for 1980 a ratio of 80 percent Amtrak and only 20 per cent state funding for such additional service (rising to 50-50 in 1982).

A little enthusiasm

But this is only the merest start on what needs to be done, if a really useful rail passenger system is to be re-established. Long term financing to make possible long term planning is essential. More capital funds are needed to upgrade equipment and roadbed if passengers are to be attracted on more than an emergency, no-gas basis. A stable route structure, complementary to airline and bus service, needs to be established.

Another prospect worth exploring is a return of the old railway postal service. Mail subsidies are a traditional way to encourage transportation development, as with the embryo airlines in the 1930s; the intercity postal trucks in use now burn millions of gallons of gas but cannot carry passengers; and in any case, mail delivery could hardly be worse. Amtrak already serves 20 of the 21 cities where the postal service's bulk mail centres are located, and one study shows that Amtrak can also meet first-class handling requirements for distances up to 1,000 miles.

Above all, Amtrak needs what is not yet in sight — an administration and a congress enthusiastically committed to rail passenger service. Besides, a president who started cutting highway funds and building up the railroads might find it easier to persuade people there really is an oil shortage.

VICTOR MACKIE

Victoria's MP relishes defence job

OTTAWA — Allan McKinnon, the lowly gunner who rose to be minister of defence, is finding that his assessment of the sorry state of the defence department, when he was defence critic in the opposition, was right on target.

He's been busy getting briefings from senior officers and officials, working a 14-hour day and liking it because he freely confesses to being a workaholic. What has surprised him is that much of the material he has been given in the briefings as to the state of the department sounds remarkably similar to speeches he made from the opposition benches when he was hammering his predecessor Barney Danson.

The military brass was taken aback when he told them right at the outset, following a defence council meeting, that in future he did not want to preside over the meetings unless there was something particular for which it was called. He has had long experience with the forces, staying as an officer in the services until 1965.

He now has a surplus of office space because he, like several of his cabinet colleagues, has been given two departments to administer — defence and veterans affairs. He will be giving up one suite of offices formerly occupied by the defeated veterans affairs minister Donald Macdonald.

Fighter review

"Members are scurrying around trying to find suitable office space as the transition takes place, me I've got too many," he said during and interview on what it's like to move from defence critic to defence minister. He is determined to improve the lot of the defence forces.

High on his priority list of "must do" activities is a review of the $2.3 billion fighter aircraft program. The defeated Liberal government was in the process of selecting a new fighter for Canada's air force. It expected to sign a contract for over 130 aircraft in October. It had cut the long list of available planes down to two — the General Dynamics F-16 and the McDonnell Douglas F-18A.

McKinnon is critical of the way the list was cut to two planes. He was suspicious that the main reason the two were left was because they were the cheapest — not a very good way to select a fighter plane for Canada. Since becoming minister he has met with Gen. Paul Manson, who is in charge of the fighter project, and is weighing the explanations for cutting the list down to those two particular aircraft.

At one time, before the government changed, he had said Canada should bargain with Iran to buy 78 Grumman F-14 fighters from that country. It wants to get rid of them. They are sophisticated, costly aircraft provided Iran by the United States when the shah was in power.

But after the Jerusalem embassy controversy blew up and aroused the Arabs, he doubts Iran would be interested in making such sales to Canada. "They probably wouldn't want to sell us buckets of sand now," he says ruefully.

One of the perks of being defence minister is you get a military driver and a military car to drive you to work and take you home. The new minister gets to his office around 9 a.m. He goes first to national defence headquarters in downtown Ottawa. There he is briefed for most of the morning and signs letters after reading and replying to communications. Time out for lunch and into conferences or private meetings with officials in his West Block office. He usually gets home in time to watch the 11 p.m. news on television, and then to bed.

He moved his family here from his home in Victoria several years ago. During a familiarization course for new MPs held last week on Parliament Hill a discussion developed around whether an MP should leave his family in his constituency or move to Ottawa. Definitely the latter as far as McKinnon is concerned. Why? Because he's seen too many marriages crack up over the prolonged separations. There are too many temptations around Parliament Hill, he says.

He now occupies a choice office in the West Block — the choicest. It was former finance minister John Turner's office. Then James Richardson inherited it from Turner when the former became defence minister. When he in turn quit the Trudeau cabinet Barney Danson, the new defence minister at that time, took over. Now McKinnon is enjoying it, complete with the hidden stairway that provides an escape route when necessary leading outside the building.

The only other office on Parliament Hill with such a facility is that occupied by Prime Minister Joe Clark. It was at one time Mackenzie King's office suite and a special escape avenue was built in to avoid unwanted petitioners or delegations. A secret panel in the wall clicks open revealing the hidden exit.

A Saskatchewan boy, Allan McKinnon was born in Canora on a cold, blustery winter's day in January, 1917. He received his high school education at Kincaid. "That's where I learned my Saskatchewan high school fractured French."

Leaving school he was, like so many other Saskatchewan boys of that era, a "pretty good hockey player." He was hired to play for the Delhi Imperials in Ontario and got a job in the Imperial Tobacco plant at Delhi.

With the outbreak of war in 1939 he enlisted in the artillery. He returned from overseas in 1942 to take his commission at Gordon Head and found it difficult to get back overseas as an artillery officer. He served in Shilo as an instructor and then back to Gordon Head. Finally he made it back overseas early in 1944 but in order to see action he had to transfer to the infantry and went to Italy as a platoon commander with the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry, serving with them until the end of the war. He was awarded the Military Cross.

During the period of occupation he was stationed in Germany, and returned to Canada in 1946 where he was adjutant at Work Point barracks at Esquimalt. He took the Canadian Army staff college course in 1953 and thereafter was employed as a staff officer in Oakville, Ottawa, Winnipeg and Chatham, Ont. After leaving the forces in 1965 with the rank of major, he went into teaching and later became a trustee of the Greater Victoria school board and finally chairman of the board.

He entered politics and was elected to the House of Commons in 1972. He has been re-elected ever since.

A methodical, not flamboyant but very effective opposition critic, he has probed deeply enough to hurt the Liberals when they were the government. He lashed into the external affairs department for its bungled handling of compensation from the USSR when the Russian satellite crashed into northern Canada and spread nuclear debris over a wide area.

He follows John Diefenbaker's dictum: "Know the answers before you ask the questions in the House."

He has heard much grumbling and complaints over the years from colleagues over unification of the armed forces imposed on the Pearson government by Paul Hellyer and finally approved by Parliament 12 years ago. One of his first acts after becoming minister was to arrange for the establishment of a board of five to tour the forces and find out whether unification is good or bad for the forces. He remains to be convinced that the impact has all been to the good as several in the department have tried to tell him. "If it's so good, why all the complaints?"

Unification review

There was hanky panky in high places during the defeated government's regime, he says. In opposition, McKinnon asked for an investigation of Boeing aircraft sales in Canada. Now the Tories are in [illegible] has sent a memo to Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence asking for a review of a secret RCMP report presented to the Trudeau government last year on the U.S. corporation's Canadian operations.

He has been a busy man since being sworn into office. Ahead lies the difficult task of expanding the forces and finding the money was drained away during Danson's term as he offered to help the government get out of financial binds. The money was allegedly loaned but try and get it back, says the quiet but blunt-spoken McKinnon.

Lift the sanctions

The decision of President Carter not to lift sanctions on Zimbabwe-Rhodesia is a deplorable one indeed. The country now has black majority rule with a truly committed Christian as its prime minister, Bishop Abel Muzorewa. To say that the new government is not representative of the people is utter nonsense! The so-called Patriotic Front is nothing but a lot of marxist terrorists. Robert Mugabe stated that he would "not bother with the luxury of a democratically elected Parliament" or words to that effect, and if he and his fellow terrorist Joshua Nkomo ever got into power (which God forbid!) Zimbabwe-Rhodesia would experience a bloodbath like so many other dictator-ruled black African states, especially Uganda under Idi Amin.

Sanctions against both Rhodesia and South Africa should never have been started in the first place, as both these countries mind their own business and are bulwarks against communist encroachment on the African continent. These sanctions are not in the interests either of the western world, nor of the black peole of Rhodesia and South Africa.

Rather they are in the interests of that modern Tower of Babel known as the United Nations, which aims at world government under the control of the international bankers and financiers and their agents, the Trilateral Commission of which Carter is a member. Carter claims to have been "born again." It wouldn't do him any harm to be born once more! — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

He goes too far

In his letter (June 8) inciting people to protest against the Trident Base, Geoffrey Edwards goes too far. He says: "I urge you to try it [protesting] . . . What would you like to change? Pick a small thing . . ."

He also says: "We live in a society which teaches us that we are largely at the whim of forces over which we have no control." Surely we live in a democracy and abide by the decision of the majority. To confront authority and try to force action by a small group is the marxist method of seizing power and the majority do not want this in Canada.

The threat to our way of life comes from the encroachment of liberties, etc. by communist takeover which are steadily creeping across the world.

Pope demonstrates his power

and ANTON KOENE
London Observer

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland — When Poland gained a Pope, it lost a great actor. Pope John Paul knows precisely how to manipulate a crowd. With a simple gesture he can rouse them to near hysterical enthusiasm or reduce them to obedient silence.

The mere demonstration of the power of his presence, before he has said a word, must be enough to make the Iron Curtain regimes tremble.

In the negotiations leading to the visit, one of the fears of the Polish authorities was that the Pope would not stick to the Vatican's tacit agreement to avoid the delicate issue of human rights while in the country.

Their fears were justified. The Pope's campaign began in Warsaw with a general appeal for human rights. It continued in Gniezno with a direct reference to the suppression of the church in Czechslovakia.

It went even further in Czestochowa, first with an appeal for support for Christians in Hungary, then with a reference to Berlin.

Yet the Pope is not out to drive a wedge between state and church. On the contrary, what he wants to achieve is the fullest possible cooperation between the two. He believes that the authoritarian systems of Catholicism and Communism can not only tolerate one another but can work along parallel lines.

The Pope's charisma moved millions last week. Pilgrims tramped hundreds of miles, many in broken shoes or barefoot, to catch a glimpse of him or just to hear his voice.

Millions more would have come, had not the authorities refused to grant days off to three out of the four who requested them, and turned down three out of four requests for extra trains and buses.

Not only Poles came. Pilgrims travelled to the massive open-air services from Czechslovakia, Hungary and even from the Soviet Union. A group of Lithuanian Jews came to try to get the Pope to plead their cause for the right to emigrate to Israel.

The power the Pope wields is extraordinary. The East Europeans see in him a leadership which they can respect and which they lack in their own countries.

If this Pope were to call for a crusade against Communism, his divisions would far outnumber those of his opponents, and his weapons could not be countered with anything man-made.

There is something frightening about the way masses can be moved to follow a leader who fills a leadership vacuum.

So far Pope John Paul has shown himself a supporter of ecumenical movements and of tolerance towards other religions. But his church does not have a history of tolerance, and it can only be hoped that this Pope will not be tempted to use the power he knows he can wield in order to gain concessions for Roman Catholics at the expense of others.

His followers pave his route with flowers and kiss the ground he has walked on. They would follow him into the jaws of Hell if he asked them.

The Church organized its own stewards to control the crowds. The Polish state kept its own militia in the background, only to emerge if the church could not keep control.

The Church stewards, many of them priests, are tougher than policemen. They do not hesitate to use violence if they think it necessary.

It is this fanaticism that cast a shadow over the sun-drenched visit of the Pope. He alone can determine whether the force he has unleashed will be used for good or evil.

. . . while Kremlin watches anxiously

By DEV MURARKA

MOSCOW, The Russians sense an element of demagogy in the Pope's approach to the world. His strenuous efforts to speak as many languages as he can, to project his image through the media, to travel widely, are interpreted as signs that he intends to establish himself as a political as well as a religious leader.

The danger, according to Soviet experts, is that, encouraged by his surging popularity, as demonstrated in Poland, he will come to believe in his Messianic role and that this could give rise to new tensions in the Soviet bloc.

But, apart from the sheer embarrassment of such am intense display of religious fervor in a Communist nation, they are not unduly alarmed at the implications of the visit.

In the Kremlin, the key question is whether it has made a confrontation between church and state more or less likely. On the whole, the answer is less likely.

Soviet experts believe that, motivated by commonsense and a desire to insure that his fellow Poles do not suffer in a clash, the Pope will be encouraged to cooperate with the Communist authorities.

After all, what point would there be in bringing about a confrontation which he would be unable to control and in which he would be able to offer no practical help?

In the opinion of the Kremlin, the new Pope, despite his rhetoric about human rights and religious freedom, is a moderate among Polish church leaders.

Some Soviet observers see a similarity between his behavior and that of President Carter — and coming from the Russians that is not a compliment. Instead of attending to the problems of the church, he has concentrated on image-building.

In the same way, Carter won the presidency by promising to cure domestic ills but has spent most of his energy conducting global policy, with indifferent results.

There is a similarity too — they say — in the way the Pope has used slogans such as human rights only against an external enemy, Communism.

The Russians are therefore disappointed. Catholicism does not affect them very much, except in the Baltic states, but they do not want to cause offence to anyone, either the Poles or the Vatican.

So there are no polemics against the Pope. Their attitude is one of waiting and watching and hoping that the Pope will be guided by the need for a practical relationship between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

Plight of the single woman

By MICHELE LANDSBERG
Toronto Star

Does it soften a bitter blow to know that it wasn't aimed at you personally, that you're just a digit spun helplessly around in a statistical whirlwind?

Maybe. But last week (the week, ironically, in which Toronto finally decided to remove the word "spinster" from its marriage licence forms) I read an article which made me feel that fate has been especially cruel to this generation of single women.

"I've made my peace with living my life alone," said a 37-year-old friend of mine, "but it's harder to give up the idea of having children." I thought of her when I read Goodbye Marriage by Andrew Hacker, a glum overview of recent studies of marriage, in the New York Review of Books.

Since Canada doggedly follows in the United States' sociological footsteps, I have no qualms in quoting Hacker's U.S. statistics. And here they are: though nine out of 10 women get married in their 20s, 40 per cent of those marriages will end in divorce. Once divorced, a woman in her 20s has a 76 per cent chance of remarrying (though it drops to 56 per cent if she has three children); in her 30s, her chances fall to 56 per cent; in her 40s, 32 per cent; in her 50s, 12 per cent.

A woman who doesn't marry at all until her 30s has a 50 per cent greater risk of divorce than her younger sister. And here's the worst news of all: by age 40, there are only 100 available men for every 137 unattached women in the U.S.

Where are the men? They're either married, or in the process of divorcing their wives and remarrying much younger women, or coming out of the closet, or staying home with mumsie, or dead. (A third of all U.S. wives are widowed before the age of 40.)

Of course, I didn't need the statistics to know that the news was bad. I know dozens of single women who are bright, loving, physically attractive, emotionally grown-up and accomplished, who seem to have few male counterparts.

It would be wrong (and I'd be smartly slapped on the wrist for it) to fall into the "spinster heresy," the smug, condescending view that all single women are to be pitied.

When my friend calls me after work, she's usually fresh from a shower (in the middle of the day!) and about to contemplate a clutch of travel brochures for her summer vacation. She has money and time to keep fit, travel and cultivate a wide circle of friends. To talk to her, I have to cram the receiver into my clavicle while distractedly juggling three pots on the stove and fending off with my elbows three hungry kids who want to eat dessert before supper is ready.

Both my friend and I know that marriage is no fairy tale: married men have the fewest illnesses, married women the most. It's estimated that half of all U.S. husbands have extramarital affairs. According to Hacker, half the men in one study (average age 36) had had at least 20 affairs; the wives, of course, suffered deeply.

Another sociologist cited in Hacker's article fiendishly placed a tape recorder in the living rooms of married couples and the results were unanimous: the wives desperately tried to start conversations, the husband desperately tried to avoid them.

And I remember a marriage quiz I once edited at a magazine: a startling number of women sent back the questionnaire with a scrawled note in the margin: "I wish he would wash more often."

Yes, marriage means living with someone else's smells, moods, habits and temper. At its worst, it can mean, as thousands will testify, a lifetime of strained silences, chafing resentments, numbed emotions or murderous domestic hatred.

But I know that's not what my friend imagines when she talks of might-have-beens. And I know that while she cherishes her independance, she also wishes she weren't facing her future alone.

We were, after all, brought up to be married, this generation of adult women. From toddler days, it was Jack and Jill going up the hill, and never mind how they came down. Our skipping [illegible] resounded with love and marriage and the baby carriage. Even when we were cynical students, swearing off marriage, not one of us pictured ourselves being alone at 40.

Some of the best women I know have given up on ever finding the right man. No matter how bravely they talk about fulfilling careers, their network of friends, their madcap vacations or adorable cats, I think fate has placed an unkind burden on them. They were raised in one era and are living out their lives in another, and it has never been easy or comfortable to be a bridge.

After the election, a rare candor

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Bless the Honorable Walter Dinsdale, an MP since 1951, a privy councillor since 1960. He put the fact that he and others like George Hees and Marcel Lambert were passed over in the cabinet-making so nicely. Joe had such a wealth of talent, such riches in able MPs, that he simply had to choose from the newer, younger ones. That reveals both grace and common sense.

Jake Epp and John Fraser got the proverbial cess-pits of cabinet responsibility — respectively Indian Affairs and the Post Office. Fraser, a Vancouver lawyer, is much better known than Epp. Part of it was his run for the leadership, part that he's a personality with more gristle than most. If he is seen, say in 1981, as one who has led the postal service into both improved work and a new era in labor relations, it will be a miracle. This miracle is possible, though unlikely.

For Epp no miracle is even thinkable. His ministerial constituency of Indians, Metis, and Inuit is so widespread and discordant in its views and aims, and so ingrained with criticism that any federal minister gets the withering treatment. Oh, Jean Chretien survived and kept resilient but he accomplished little; Warren Allmand was rather cherished by the native groups because he was invariably a sympathetic listener, but he made little progress.

Epp has a fine-sculptured, delicate look to him, which, taken with his politeness and quite old-fashioned habits of speech make him almost too good for day-to-day politics. Rather a Sunday sort of fellow. This is somewhat deceptive because like most Mennonites, Epp is a bear for work and for detail, and he never quits trying in a positive, Christian way to understand. There are, however, simply too many insoluble difficulties in native affairs — especially with regard to land claims — for Epp to do more than fill his and his new constituents time in a moderate, constructive way. My point? Despite the portfolio, he is not a dud.

I chivvied Pierre De Bane, recently minister of Supply and Services. How did he explain the government's defeat?

"Simple," he said. "The people were right. We deserved to be defeated. We went into an election without policies and without programs. We were naked."

FRASER
. . . miracles unlikely

Isn't it lovely to hit a candid politician once in a while?

Now that Gilbert Rondeau, former MP for Shefford, has dropped his appeal and will serve his sentence for various misdemeanors during the years he was a parliamentarian for Social Credit, one is able to make some general remarks about how he got into some of the difficulties he did.

One of the secrets of the stability in a minority situation of the Pearson government between 1963 and 1968 was that the Social Credit MPs co-operated so thoroughly and unobtrusively. An obvious reason was the arrangements made by Allan MacEachen and Jack Pickersgill in particular to keep the Social Credit members, as MPs, satisfied. Among the favors was a wide broadening of services. In effect, the sixth floor, east end of the Centre Block became a party headquarters. Staff proliferated, the Gestetner machines never ceased whirling, and the bent for the rural Quebec MPs to bring loads of their constituents to Ottawa to show them around, to eat in the restaurant and cafeterias, etc. was let run.

Most of the Social Credit MPs were (and are) very honorable, hard-working, simple men. One, Rondeau, revelled in all the staff and perquisites. Over 10 years ago some of his excesses in using House materials — from towels, soap, ash trays, etc. to having relatives on staff at the House but working for him elsewhere were bruited about the House. I first heard of some of them from members of the Restaurant Committee in 1968. But because he was an MP, and the House and its staff is very chary about checking, let alone penalizing MPs, Rondeau was never really challenged. In sum, he's paying a severe penalty now which might have never been necessary if his colleagues or the House itself had met his bad practices head on years ago.

A young colleague of mine in television, Jack Fleishman, did a fine filmed cameo on John Crosbie last year. Jack caught some lovely bits of Newfoundland talk and some droll opinions about Crosbie. His conclusion was tentative but interesting. He believed Crosbie went out and deliberately acquired the skills and took on the mannerisms of the mixing, locquacious, humorous politician. But Fleishman thinks these are far from the real man, are merely robes for a purpose. The genuine Crosbie is aloof, intellectual and extraordinarily bright. Well, ministers of finance usually wind up as lonely fellows.

Saanich firefighters watch training fire in house slated to be demolished

Firemen torch house

A vacant house used by Saanich firemen as a training site was burned to the ground today as part of the final lesson.

Capt. Paul Smith, training officer for the department, said the house at Tolmie and Alder gave some inexperienced firemen the opportunity to simulate real conditions.

For the past week the firemen have had numerous drills, including one that saw the structure boarded up and filled with smoke before two rookies were sent inside to try and locate a third man.

Other drills included dousing chimney fires, opening up walls to search out a blaze and ladder exercises.

Smith said the house was ideal for training because it was in a vacant lot.

"We don't get houses too often that are suitable to us. But it's clear around here, allowing us a controlled burn, and there's a hydrant only 150 feet away."

Region wants more study of Tillicum centre project

The Capital Region Board Wednesday decided to ask the provincial government to hold up the proposed Tillicum shopping centre until its impact on the region as a whole can be assessed.

Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm will be asked to instruct the inspector of municipalities to suspend the Saanich council bylaw approving the project, which has already received final adoption.

The board action was instigated by Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell, who said the proposed 295,000-square-foot shopping centre would be contrary to the regional plan and have a significant impact on neighboring communities.

During the heated debate, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier reminded directors that Saanich had already questioned the legality of some aspects of the regional plan.

He said the municipality had three or four legal opinions indicating that the regional district could not dictate the size of shopping centres in component municipalities.

The board action in referring the matter to Vander Zalm is tied to a section of the Municipal Act allowing the minister to object to a bylaw he considers contrary to the public interest of the province.

Port strike fate decided tonight

The question of whether B.C.'s major ports will be reopened later this week will be answered today.

About 3,500 longshoremen have been voting on a tentative agreement over the past four days and the results are expected to be released tonight.

The strike, which began 10 days ago, has halted vital shipments through seven major ports.

Norm Cunningham, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association, said the key question is whether the longshoremen accept a new clause written into the tentative settlement reached last weekend.

He said the clause, designed as additional protection against inflation, calls for renegotiating wages and other issues if inflation exceeds 20 per cent in the first two years of the three-year contract which is retroactive to last Jan. 1.

The members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union also will have the right to strike after two years, Cunningham said.

The wage offer in the proposed pact is the same as the last offer, rejected by one vote, which called for increases of 90 cents an hour in each year of a three-year contract, he said. The current base pay is $9.10 an hour.

He said the wage offer coupled with the reopening clause means the longshoremen are "having their cake and eating it too."

Also included in the contract is a cost-of-living allowance which takes effect two years into the contract if inflation has exceeded 16 per cent by then, Cunningham said.

The longshoremen would get five cents an hour more for each one-half-per-cent jump in the inflation rate after Jan. 1, 1981, he said.

The union negotiating committee is recommending acceptance of the settlement that was worked out under the guidance of federal mediator Bill Kelly.

During previous negotiations, three tentative agreements were rejected by either union negotiators or the membership.

The strike has shut down the ports of Vancouver, Victoria, Prince Rupert, New Westminster, Port Alberni, Nanaimo and Chemainus.

UVic building beneficial

Contruction projects totalling $18.9 million have taken place on the University of Victoria campus during the last three years creating 1,400 man-years of employment in Greater Victoria, according to a university report.

The report estimates the effect of UVic's capital expenditure programs from January 1976 to December 1978 on jobs and dollars in the Victoria region.

It says that over the three years UVic's capital spending provided between 540 and 700 man-years of actual campus employment in the building trades.

The report notes construction activity during the three years has been high, in spite of a general slump in the industry elsewhere in the province. At peak periods during construction three or four times the average number of Victoria tradesmen and skilled laborers were working on the projects.

About 800 man-years of indirect employment in the local economy also resulted from the projects, the report estimates.

About 75 per cent of the 109 companies employed on the projects were local.

UVic's capital construction programs total 13 per cent of the combined value of building permits issued by Saanich and Oak Bay over the period, the report states.

Of that amount, half was applied to University Centre and the rest distributed between the MacLarin Music Wing extension, the 302-apartment Gordon Head residences, a visual arts building and an expansion to the Student Union Building.

Other projects included renovations to building electrical and heating systems and landscaping.

Estimates of major projects planned for the next five years put the number of on-campus jobs created between 240 and 320 man-years.

Indian artifacts display set

Tools, ceremonial garb and other artifacts gathered by the museum have been identified in photos and paintings which depict their function in Indian culture.

The pictures will be displayed beside the actual artifacts and museum ethnologists will explain the identification techniques used.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. was 3.42 million shares, compared with 4.57 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in Brascan Ltd. A would resume in co-ordination with the American Stock Exchange following a halt at the opening.

The exchange said 10,098,209 shares of Brascan A were tendered under an offer by Edper Equities Ltd. of $28 a share for up to five million shares.

Purchase of the tendered shares will be pro-rated at 50 per cent. Brascan A closed Wednesday at $24.

Trading in shares of General Motors Corp. was halted shortly after 11 a.m. pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $70.

Among industrials, Northern Telecom lost 1¼ to $46, Seagram Co. ⅞ to $37⅝, Imperial Oil A ¾ to $33⅞, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ¾ to $71 and Petrofina Canada ⅝ to $36.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — International Business Machines shares, declining for the second straight session, led a general retreat in the stock market today. Stock Exchange-listed issues.

IBM shares, which fell 2⅝ Wednesday, dropped another 1½ to $73⅞. Turnover of nearly 500,000 shares, after a delayed opening, put the stock high on the active list.

The company said Wednesday afternoon that it had seen indications of apossible shift among its customers to increased leasing, rather than buying, of IBM office equipment.

American got bad mileage out of his tear gas canister

Citizens may need tear gas in the City of Brotherly Love but the Canadian scene isn't so violent, Judge Harold Alder told a 20-year-old Philadelphian on Wednesday.

Neil Elliott Dorval pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court to possession of a prohibited weapon, a container of tear gas.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Dorval was among a group of persons at Fort and Langley who were approached by city police about 7:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Dorval was arrested after the canister was found on his person.

Duty legal aid lawyer John Hills explained that prior to entering Canada six days ago, Dorval went to a camping store in Philadelphia and picked up the tear gas canister off the shelf. The tear gas is legally sold there as a chemical "defence" weapon, which was the purpose Dorval had in mind.

Hills said Dorval entered Canada through the Blaine border crossing and a Canadian customs officials saw the canister in Dorval's belongings, checked it and allowed it to go through.

Hills asked for an absolute discharge and Mulligan agreed with the application, adding that Dorval may have been misled by the "situation" in the U.S.

Alder granted the application and commented that things aren't "that bad up here."

Man cleared of murder attempt

A B.C. Supreme Court jury took one hour and 20 minutes Wednesday to clear 21-year-old Kenneth Andrew Burgess of charges of attempted murder, wounding with intent and assault causing bodily harm.

A smiling Burgess left the prisoner's box to join friends in the public area of the courtroom while Mr. Justice Hugh Legg thanked the jurors for their public service.

Burgess was accused following the beating of Elizabeth Marie MacBon, aged four at the time, in the early hours of Dec. 21 in her bedroom in Esquimalt. She was taken to hospital with her face covered with bruises and swelling as well as other injuries.

The child's mother, Brenda MacBon, told court she awakened in the night and said Burgess was in her livingroom. She and the man to whom she is engaged, John Baker, said they went to the child's room where they found her beaten.

The attending physician in hospital, Dr. Glenn Ashmead, testified the child told him, in response to questions, that "John" who was "my Daddy" hurt her.

Ashmead said the child was quite aware and responded openly with straight-forward answers given without hesitation or equivocation. But he also said her answers were her subjective perception of what happened, they were not her objective perception, and he considered the possibility of what she said had happened was slight and it was probable that what she said did not occur.

The Crown's case in the eight-day trial was presented by Ken Salt. Burgess was defended by Robert Price.

Before the judge

Conflicting evidence was heard Wednesday in provincial court about the color of traffic lights moments before a fatal three-car collision Jan. 26.

Two women testifying at the trial of 17-year-old Ronald Peter Cheeke, 1664 Burton, charged with dangerous driving, gave different accounts about the lights at Cook and Johnson the night 18-year-old Janice Campbell was killed.

A 16-year-old, front-seat passenger in Cheeke's van said she saw an amber light for Cheeke's northbound vehicle on Cook while an 18-year-old driver of an eastbound vehicle said she began to accelerate on a green light moments before the collision.

Lana Suzanne Millott, 1157 Clovelly Terrace, told Judge William Ostler she was sitting in the passenger seat of the van as it was approaching the intersection. She said she was facing the back of the van, turned around and saw a car coming and looked at the light, which was amber for traffic going north and south on Cook. When she first looked frontward, the van in which she was a passenger was just past the southern pedestrian crosswalk lines and the vehicle heading east on Johnson was going through the intersection. Millott said she wasn't sure, but thought the other car was near the western pedestrian crosswalk lines.

Millott, called as a witness by Crown counsel N.K. Varma, said she met Cheeke about 8 p.m., went to a party on Higgins Street but they stayed outside of the residence. While outside, Cheeke had consumed some liquor but she had no idea how much. They then drove to the city reservoir and to Beacon Hill Park before heading north on Cook for another residence on Balmoral.

Campbell was one of three young women thrown out of the back of the van following the impact.

Christina Jane Lambe, 18, of 155 Gorge Road East, testified she was on the extreme right-hand lane on Johnson and stopped at a red light at Cook. When the light turned green, she said, she stepped on the gas pedal but, about a car length into the intersection, she saw "something fast moving" from the right and slammed on her brakes.

She said she was at the University of Victoria "SUB pub" earlier that evening, went to a girlfriend's office downtown at about 10:15 and was proceeding to her friend's home when the accident occurred. Lambe said her friend was in her own car and also stopped for the red light in the lane next to Lambe.

Defence lawyer Ken Walton asked both girls about a statement allegedly made outside the courtroom during one of a number of inquest sessions held in February into the death of Miss Campbell.

Millott testified Lambe said she "didn't eat anything on Friday nights, she went out and got loaded."

Lambe denied making the statement and also denied that she "jumped" the light prior to impact.

Ostler ordered the case to continue Friday afternoon after Varma said he had four or five more witnesses.

Firm's Woes Ground Aviation Museum Plan

Plans for an aviation museum in Victoria have been grounded because an offer for a cheap lease on space in Market Square has fallen through.

Victoria lawyer Keith Reed, president of the Pacific Aviation Museum Society, said a deal to lease 6,500 square feet from Abacus Cities Ltd. has been killed because the company is in receivership.

Abacus, through its subsidiary Fort Victoria Holdings, had offered the society extremely attractive conditions for the space in Market Square.

Reed said that with the loss of that opportunity it now appears the museum will have to remain on hold for the time being.

The museum is to display a collection of antique aircraft, artifacts, photographs and other memorabilia.

Bank's green thumb gets raves

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Some call it 20th century Babylon but Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Mel Cooper says the new Royal Bank building to him has the look of Victoria 1980.

"I understand they are planting 2,500 plants and trees inside and outside the building. This is the idea we have been promoting for years — the city of gardens."

Cooper said he will ask the chamber to prepare a special certificate to send to the company along with a letter of commendation for the novel and interesting concept.

"We will also ask other companies to consider the flower theme when they are designing new buildings for Victoria. This is something we will be actively promoting."

He said he hopes Victoria will get more buildings featuring outdoor flowers and shrubs during the 1980s.

When the design was first presented to Victoria City council, Mayor Young expressed a bit of good-natured skepticism about whether Victoria was ready for hanging gardens in the business core.

Cooper said the new building may spur the chamber to play a more direct role in bringing nature into the downtown area.

"In Edmonton there was a large tree-planting campaign, sponsored by the chamber of commerce. We should consider something like that here. The Royal Bank has given us all a good example."

The $4 million bank, at the corner of Douglas and Fort, is a six-storey building, tapered to create outdoor planters at each level.

With the construction about completed, planting will begin for 15 Japanese Maple trees, 278 broom plants, 15 dwarf mugho pines, 24 rhododendrons, 47 western sword ferns, 260 Baltic ivy plants, 136 Virginia creepers, 890 periwinkles and 750 bulbs of crocuses, daffodils, tulips and other flowers.

Installation and maintenance is being carried out by Victor and Carole Schalk of Vic's Landscaping, 3916 Shelbourne.

Inside the bank there will be a planter suspended above the public banking area, featuring 14 varieties of tropical plants. Sixteen types of tropical trees will also be located at various places inside the building.

The building is scheduled to be opened in mid-July.

Blood donors hit target

Clinic co-ordinator Jerry Savage said today the number of donors has been slightly above target and hopefully by week's end will make up for the 180 pint shortfall in last month's clinics.

A total of 731 donors gave blood at clinics held Monday to Wednesday, with 256 at Red Cross House, 182 at Victoria Press and 293 at Mayfair shopping centre.

Clinics are being held today and Friday at Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum where more than 700 donors are expected to attend.

They signed for Canada because...

Entertainers, politicians, scribes and businessmen joined forces Wednesday to support the People-to-People petition asking Qubecers to stay in Canada.

The national petition already has several million names and it will be delivered to the cities and towns of Quebec before the referendum.

Among those who turned out in front of The Empress to back the petition was Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson.

"I signed the petition because I believe Canada is a more exciting and interesting place because of Quebec," Hanson said.

Ida Clarkson of CHEK-TV said: "I don't usually sign petitions but I think this one could be effective because it is a message directly to the people of Quebec from the rest of Canada. Everyone signing it is doing it with great enthusiasm and I hope that message gets across to the people in Quebec."

Entertainer Jerry Gosley: "I feel very strongly that Canada must stay together. I hope this petition does some good."

Victoria Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small: "I hope everyone will sign so we can send a message to the people of Quebec that we want them to stay in Canada."

The national petition was organized by Keith Cowan of Victoria, a former federal and provincial civil servant in the Maritimes.

Breakfast buffet up 45%

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Responding to pressure from the travelling public the B.C. Ferries Corporation is offering a full breakfast menu in its buffet lounge — and has increased the price 45 per cent.

In addition, the buffet lunch has gone up 10 per cent and the dinner is up seven per cent.

"Even with the increases, we're hurting," catering manager B.J. Ellett said in an interview.

"Look at how the price of food has risen in the past year — it's gone up about 25 per cent."

The buffet is offered upstairs on all stretch ferries on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run for the duration of the summer and the new breakfast price is $3.95, up from $2.75. Lunch is $4.95, up from $4.50 and dinner is $6.95, up from $6.50.

"We're not making any money on the dinner, even at $6.95 a person," Ellett said.

"We offer a baron of beef and beef prices have gone out of sight. We think the prices are fair compared to what people pay at restaurants."

B.C. Ferries started the buffet idea two years ago, charging $6.50 per adult for lunch and supper. This meant lunch cost $26 for two couples and the buffet lounge was half empty for most of the day.

Last summer the lunch price was reduced to $4.50 and became the best bargain on the trip with a full range of hot and cold meats and vegetables plus a full salad bar.

A continental breakfast was introduced, offering buns and fruit for $2.75 but Ellett conceded it was something approaching a flop. Most customers wanted bacon and eggs.

Now a full breakfast is available in the buffet at the flat rate of $3.95 per adult. Children under 12 pay half price.

"We started the buffet service on Wednesday and the early response has been good," Ellett said.

Those who can't afford the buffet price tag have the option of getting cheaper meals in the cafeteria.

Still not solved, he said, is the problem of how to get a cup of coffee on the ferry without standing in line for half an hour.

"It's frustrating to me as much as to anyone. I hate to go for one hour and forty minutes without coffee in the morning."

There is an express line inside the cafeteria but it often takes up to half an hour to get inside to gain access to the express line.

Ellett said the corporation has considered installing a coffee-and-sandwich bar elsewhere on the ferry but hasn't figured out where it could find the space.

"Starting a new coffee shop is no easy task on a ferry."

Installing coffee vending machines has also been considered but many people are not satisfied with machine coffee, he said.

Police hunt knifer

Ronald Westman, 26, of 4021 Blenkinsop, received stab wounds to the left side of his neck and chest in a scuffle with another man shortly after 2 a.m.

A police spokesman said Westman was with a group of three other men and three women who were asked to leave the hotel's beer parlor on closing.

Esquimalt at crossroads on police, fire protection

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A smaller police force and separate fire department are among the alternatives facing Esquimalt council and police board in coming weeks.

Mayor Art Young will make recommendations for the future organization of police and fire protection at a closed council meeting Monday.

The subject of a dual police-firefighting force has simmered for many years and came to a head with the recent appointment by the attorney-general of a task force on police efficiency which has made a verbal report to Esquimalt council.

Esquimalt police, who receive extra pay for doubling as firemen, are unique in the capital region where the other three core municipalities have independent, full-time fire departments, and the outer communities have volunteer firemen.

Young said today he considers it his duty to make some "fairly firm recommendations to council" to guide the development of public protection in light of the task force findings.

He said he expects controversy to develop but the question needs debate.

Without going into his proposals, Young said the future might hold several possibilities, including:

— An independent fire department.

— Contracted out fire protection through an adjoining full-time department.

— A new metro concept of fire protection involving the other municipalities.

— A combination of Esquimalt's own firemen and volunteer firefighters.

Young said Esquimalt had been well-served over the years by police doing dual duty. But in view of shortcomings in police coverage pointed out by the task force of which the aldermen were not conscious the council was going to have to make decisions soon.

"Possibly people have not been quite as well looked after as we thought," the mayor said.

Police adopted their dual role during the Second World War, prior to which public works crew handled firefighting equipment. There have been numerous attempts to split protection into two areas of responsibility, most consistently by the police union.

At present the force is at its largest with 38 members including six civilians.

Informally, the task force has told council there are standards and guidelines of the B.C. Police Commission which might be considered, including manning and equipment minimums.

The task force authorized under the Police Act, consists of Gordon Dalton, chairman, of the B.C. Police Commission; deputy police chief Bob Brolly of West Vancouver; retired deputy fire chief Bob Middleton of Vancouver, and retired Esquimalt recreation manager Harold Moist. It will make a written report soon to Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

"If the attorney-general feels we're very inefficient, he'll tell us," Young said.

Dalton said the task force spent a week interviewing Esquimalt officials, members of the force and others, including some from adjoining areas, in reaching its conclusions.

City trailer park opposed

A city plan to establish a trailer and recreational vehicle park in the Esquimalt area could seriously hurt campground businesses just outside Victoria, the B.C. Motels, Resports and Trailer Parks Association charged today.

Association president Ernie Townsend said his organization is strongly opposed to the city proposal.

"Our objection is the use of taxpayers' money for the city to go into competition with the campgrounds just outside the city," said Townsend. "We have enough trouble competing with the government as it is."

He said that even with the bumper tourist crop that came in last year there were many vacancies and spaces available at Vancouver Island campgrounds.

Townsend said that instead of setting up a trailer park for tourists in recreation vehicles, the city should simply provide an adequate parking area where they can leave their vehicles for the day while touring the city.

Such a facility, however, should be closed at night so that the RVs would move to campgrounds on the outskirts of Victoria.

City council is considering establishing a 40-unit trailer park because so many tourists are camping overnight in Victoria parking lots, especially along Dallas Road.

But Townsend says a facility in Esquimalt will only make that problem worse.

"If you have parking for 40 there will be another 40 or 50 or 80 parking around the corner waiting for the morning turnover so they can get a space," he said.

"This has been tried in other cities and it only aggravates the problem."

Tolmie blaze

Fire hazard warnings were sounded today following a bush fire Wednesday night that destroyed about two acres of grass and broom on the west side of Mount Tolmie.

Firemen from Oak Bay and Saanich spent nearly three hours fighting the blaze.

Saanich fire chief Art Fryer said a drier than normal spring has created hazardous conditions in the bush and warned residents to exercise caution.

Ask the Times

Q. My husband and I are visiting from Saskatchewan and we were fascinated by the Swiftsure sailboat race. We would like to time our holidays again next year so that we can see it again. Can you tell me when the race will be held? J.C.

A. The race is always held on the last weekend in May, the race beginning on the Saturday morning.

'Stand up to rapists'.

Posters encouraging women to stand up to rapists are a possibility for Greater Victoria, a spokesman for Rape Relief said today.

Victoria Rape Relief spokesman Rowena Hunnisett said the organization supports a Vancouver Rape Relief poster campaign urging women not to be intimidated and to defend themselves against attacks.

She said a similar campaign could be started here if the Vancouver tactic is successful.

"We will consider it," said Hunnisett, who added Rape Relief will examine any method that is an effective deterrent.

Two sets of posters have appeared in the Point Grey area of Vancouver recently. Both urge women to resist rapists.

(See story on Page 26).

Here in Victoria, a row erupted last year over the showing of a controversial film in area high schols.

The film advocated women submit to rapists in some instances to avoid being beaten.

REAR WARNING on sign wasn't exactly what the moving company had in mind when half of a double-wide mobile home came to sudden, unexpected stop at Glanford and McKenzie this morning. Unit toppled off bed of transport truck owned by Roy's Trucking of Vancouver when air shocks malfunctioned as vehicle was turning at the intersection. No one was injured in the mishap which occurred at about 8:30 a.m. Mobile crane was to right the home later today. The home is bound for the Campbell River area.

WHA survivors happy with results of draft

MONTREAL (CP) — Seven years of struggle ended Wednesday for four survivors of the World Hockey Association when Quebec Nordiques, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers and Hartford Whalers took their turns at the National Hockey League expansion draft.

The exercise was a giant step toward the next challenge facing the four clubs — chasing a Stanley Cup title.

Despite the apparent slim pickings, the newcomers were enthusiastic about what they got.

"We'll be young and aggressive, and no one will come into my building and push us around," said Winnipeg's combative general manager, John Ferguson, who surprised some by taking left winger Bobby Hull from Chicago Black Hawks in the third round.

Hull was on his Manitoba farm saying he won't return to the Jets, but coach Tommy McVie said the team might succeed in changing his mind.

Edmonton general manager Larry Gordon, who wanted to shore up the Oilers defence, felt he'd done that.

"We looked at the defence, and obviously that was our club's weakness. Out of the ratings we gave them, we got four of the top five defencemen available. The fellow that we weren't able to get was Dave Farrish."

The New York Rangers rearguard was taken in the first round by Quebec, whose general manager, Maurice Fillion, also was happy.

"The only guy we really wanted badly and didn't get was Lee Fogolin," said Fillion of the Buffalo Sabres defenceman selected in the second round by Edmonton.

"I have to say I'm very proud of the job we did. We got 90 per cent of the picks we wanted."

Fillion said he was especially pleased to get Rangers right winger Pierre Plante in the fourth round.

"I know Pierre from having coached him when he was a junior. He's the kind of guy who can help the Nordiques. He's strong defensive winger. He has a good shot and the skating and size to take care of himself.

Jack Kelley, Hartford's director of hockey operations, said his club had been well prepared for the proceedings.

"For the old teams' protected lists, we had nine of the 17 teams right on the nose, we missed four by one and the rest by two," Kelley noted.

McVie said the Jets were looking for players who wouldn't back down, a result of his experience as a coach with Washington Capitals before joining the Jets during last season.

"What we tried to do, because of my experience in Washington, was pick players, No. 1, who won't get intimidated, and, No. 2, who will work hard, because the fastest way to turn people away from a rink is with a hockey club that won't work."

No established team could lose more than four players, including one goaltender, and teams were permitted to add a player to their protected list of two netminders and at least 15 others after losing a player other than a goalie.

Little brother Joe best Niekro now

Times News Services

He used to be the other Niekro, but not anymore.

Joe Niekro is emerging from the shadow of his older brother, Phil, and at 34 seems to be approaching the prime of his pitching life.

Niekro posted his ninth consecutive victory and became the first 10-game winner in the National Baseball League Wednesday as Houston Astros edged Philadelphia Phillies 4-3.

"I'm just being consistent, throwing strikes not only with the knuckler but with my other pitches — the slider and the fast ball," said Niekro, who has lost only twice. "It feels good to be on a first-place club, a team that as been scoring early for me and playing great behind me."

The Astros lead the National West with a 37-27 record. The latest they have ever been in first place is June 24.

Cesar Cedeno drove in three runs for the Astros and Art Howe slugged his third home run of the season, giving Niekro all the support he needed to set a team record for consecutive triumphs. The late Don Wilson had won eight in a row.

Joe Niekro is 10-2 with a 2.43 earned run average. His 40-year-old brother, Phil, is 7-9 with a 4.51 ERA for Atlanta Braves.

Joe, who learned to throw the knuckler from his brother about five years ago and credits that pitch with keeping him in the major leagues, says Phil still has the best knuckler in baseball — but that he has a better slider and fastball.

There was a full schedule in both the National and American Leagues, but there also was plenty of action off the fields.

Boston Red Sox traded first baseman George (Boomer) Scott to Kansas City Royals for outfielder Tom Poquette and also acquired slugger Bob Watson from Houston Astros.

Scott had issued a play-me-or-trade-me edict when he was benched last month after going hitless in 25 times at bat. Since May 25, he had one hit and two walks in three pinch-hitting appearances. The slick-fielding 35-year-old first baseman was hitting .224 with four home runs and 23 RBIs in 45 games.

Watson was acquired for minor-league pitcher Peter Ladd, a player to be named later and an unspecified amount of cash.

New York Yankees may have come up as losers, but not because of a trade.

Yankee pitching ace Ron Guidry went into hospital at Bloomington, Minn., for an ice massage and therapy treatment of strained and possibly pulled muscles in his lower back.

Guidry, who was forced to retire after seven innings Tuesday night, was still in some pain and that the Cy Young Award winner will miss at least one pitching turn.

AND ALSO: San Francisco Giants have sold third-string catcher John Tamargo to Denver Bears of the American Association, thereby making room for pitcher John Montefusco, who returns from the disabled list . . . Second baseman Lou Whitaker of Detroit Tigers has been placed on the 15-day disabled list after x-rays disclosed a chipped fracture of the ring finger of his right hand . . . Whitaker was the AL rookie of the year last season, suffered the injury Tuesday night against Oakland A's on a throw from the outfield . . . BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Defensive end Jim Marshall, 41, who became a free agent in February, has signed his 20th pro football contract with Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League.

Evans most alert but Irish survive

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

If it hadn't been for goalkeeper Dave Evans of Vancouver Burrards, Victoria Shamrocks would have had a yawner in Western Lacrosse Association play at Memorial Arena Wednesday night. Evans was simply outstanding in a losing cause as he stopped 53 shots.

As it was the Irish were still much the best as they got by a shorthanded Burrards' club 11-8 before about 500 fans and set the stage for tonight's visit to New Westminster as the biggest game of what is a crucial week in their fortunes.

By their win, the Rocks moved into third place, three points behind second-place Coquitlam Adanacs and eight behind the front-running Salmonbellies. Adanacs posted a 15-7 win at home over Nanaimo Timbermen the same evening to keep the Hub City squad in the cellar.

The key to that statistic is that the Rocks have four games in hand on the Salmonbellies and a win in New Westminster tonight would give them the springboard they need to make a run at the leaders.

Then on Saturday, things get no easier as the Rocks have a double date in Nanaimo.

First, they will play out the last 12 minutes and 22 seconds of the suspended game of May 31, which was called when referee Dallas Lansdell suffered an injury and which the Timbermen were leading 12-11 at the time.

The regularly scheduled game against the T-Men will follow with the postponed game to start at 7 p.m.

And it's unlikely too that the Rocks will have Kevin Alexander in uniform for either game as nothing has been resolved in the negotiations between the two clubs for his services.

However, there will be a meeting between WLA commissioner Wally Donaldson and Nanaimo and Shamrock officials before the games to see if a way out of the stalemate can be found.

Shamrock officials were not hopeful and it may be that Donaldson will have to hand down an arbitrary ruling on the matter if the two clubs can't agree.

A decision must be made before July 1 when team lineups will be frozen.

Meanwhile, against Burrards, who were down to 13 players — which is only one more than they had in their first visit here — the Rocks never looked back after racing away to a 3-0 lead, which they parlayed into a 4-2 margin after one and 8-4 after two.

Burrards made a belated rally in the third after getting behind 10-5 and scored three of the game's final four goals.

Four goals without a reply in just under four minutes at the start of the second period, two of them by Bob Cool, put the Rocks ahead 8-2 and it seemed a rout was in order.

But enter Evans who otherwise turned in a spectacular period stopping 22 shots.

Goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer of the Irish was almost as sharp as Evans, only giving way in the final minutes.

Cool, Norm Baker and junior pickup Jim Boyd each scored two goals for the Irish, Boyd getting one into an empty net as Burrards pulled Evans for an extra attacker.

Dan Green, Art Webster, Dave Thomson, Jim Lynch and Steve Buckley had singles.

Although Webster only got one goal, it was a big one, well-earned and turned the tide at the time.

The Shamrocks were nursing a 3-1 lead with Dave Lowden in the penalty box when Webster, who was being double teamed on the boards, broke loose to go in alone and beat Evans to give the Irish a 4-1 edge. On the next rush Burrards got their power-play goal but they had lost the edge they might have gained.

Big Doug Hayes was the leading gunner for Burrards with three goals and two assists. Mike McMillan had a pair and Jim Northey, Stu Aird and Terry Bingley singles.

Tim Kelly scored three goals for Coquitlam while Mark Valastin, Matt Aitken and Randy Delmonico each tallied twice. Jim Aitchison, Fred Klomp, Dave Durante and Gord Quilty added singles.

Gord Racette and Doug Angrove each scored two goals for Nanaimo while singles were contributed by Brian Spaven, Brian Evans and Ron Sywack.

Speaking of coaches, Victoria has its share

Al Morrow of the University of Victoria has been named to coach the Canadian four without cox crew at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico during July.

The selection of Morrow means Victoria will supply two of the four Canadian rowing coaches.

Surfs top Caps after shootout

Times News Services

Steve David tallied the winning goal for California in a shootout Wednesday night as the Surf scored a 3-2 North American Soccer League triumph over Vancouver Whitecaps at Anaheim, Calif.

David broke a deadlock that had lasted since the first half as the two teams played a pair of sudden-death overtimes without scoring.

Gerry Ingram scored both of the California goals in regulation time, the first unassisted and the second on an assist by Wolfgang Suhnholz.

Vancouver's Kevin Hector had knotted the contest 2-2 at the 42:25 mark after Derek Possee had put the Whitecaps on the board.

Austrians spoil it for Ron

VIENNA (Reuter) — Austria defeated England 4-3 Wednesday, handing England its first soccer defeat in 14 matches and only the second since manager Ron Greenwood took over.

Bruno Pezzey headed home two goals for Austria, whose which also got two goals from Kurt Welzl — celebrating his return to the Austrian side after a three-year absence.

Austria, spurred on by the memory of its last encounter with England — a 7-0 defeat in 1973 — always looked the better side. Manager Robert Stotz' decision to move Herbert Prohaska up from midfield worked admirably.

At the back, Captain Roberta Sara, who made his debut as a 17-year-old in Austria's last victory over England in 1965, was solid and set up many attacks.

England failed to get going in the first half and, in the second, sent on million-dollar striker Trevor Francis for Bob Latchford. But he did not see enough of the ball to show his capabilities.

New contract for Sedlbauer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Winger Ron Sedlbauer, who set a single-season team goal-scoring record last season, has signed a new contract with Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

Sedlbauer signed a one-year agreement with an option year, the team announced. The native of Burlington, Ont. scored 40 goals last season, two more than the former club record, shared by Don Lever and Bobby Schmautz.

Mussels sign eleven players

Victoria Mussels have signed their first 11 players to a professional baseball contract in the Northwest League on Wednesday.

The move leaves seven spots to fill before Mussels travel to Bellingham on Tuesday for their league opener.

Roy Moretti of Victoria, who had a 6-5 pitching record with Mussels last season, has signed and is expected to start on the mound in the first home game June 22 at Royal Athletic Park.

Other hurlers signed are Calvin Beal, also in his second year of pro ball, and Ed Koziol.

Doug Morganti, who led Mussels with six home runs last season; Bob Potts, a third-year outfielder-first baseman who hit .305 for Victoria last season; Steve Young, a sharp rookie shortstop from California; Danny Purpura, a second baseman; Emil Drzayich, an all-star first baseman from Boise; Brian Edwards, a catcher-first baseman from California; Pete Rabassa, who hit .237 at Grays Harbor last year; and Nick Kintz, a .268-hitting shortstop from Grays Harbor, round out the list.

Manager Bob Bryk intends to have 18 players signed by the weekend and will probably start league play with that number. The league limit is 20.

Feuding racers talk on

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Efforts to end the feud between the United States Auto Club and Championship Auto Racing Teams continued Wednesday, but no agreement was reached, said USAC president Dick King.

Ray Smartis, president of Ontario (Calif.) Motor Speedway, met with USAC officials for about 3½ hours at their headquarters here, and "negotiations will continue," King said.

Smartis left to return to California after the meeting, King added. He refused to discuss details of the meeting or whether any progress was made.

No date was set for further talks, King said.

Smartis, who is acting as a mediator between the two groups, and his publicity director, Bob Russo, presented a compromise agreement to CART officials at Trenton, N.J., Sunday following a CART-sponsored race there. After getting the approval of the CART board of directors, Smartis flew here to meet with USAC officials.

Details of the compromise were not revealed, but differences over manifold pressures used in championship racing cars is not a stumbling block to an agreement, it was reported.

CART broke away from USAC six months ago following a dispute over lack of car owners on USAC's board of directors. The two organizations have also been unable to agree on rules lowering the manifold pressure — or boost — in championship cars to make races such as the Indianapolis 500 more competitive.

The two organizations each ran a race last Sunday and both drew crowds of less than 20,000 — far less than the number needed to make a profit in a championship car race.

First-round deadline closing in on the tardy

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Boy, are those tennis courts scattered through parks in the Capital Regional District going to be humming this weekend!

They are, that is, if all the competitors entered in our sixth annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament intend to get their first-round matches played before the deadline of 5 p.m. Monday and avoid disqualification.

More than two weeks were provided for first-round games when the tourney kicked off on June 2. In that time some 90 or so matches in five events — four singles contests and the mixed doubles — were supposed to be played and the results handed back into the Times.

Well, here we are with less than four first-round days left and only 20 matches played! Or that's all we've heard from, anyway. That leaves more than 70 games still to be played and all this inactivity comes with the best tennis weather of the year. What on earth are Times Tennis players going to do when it rains?

No one event is to blame, really, for being slow. Out of 55 first-round matches scheduled in the men's singles (the largest event by far), we have a mere 14 results.

There were 13 first-round games set in the women's singles and so far only one pair has done battle.

Out of the 10 first-round games scheduled in the boys' singles, only two games have been reported and things are even worse in the mixed doubles where one result has been handed in out of 11 games on the program.

Trouble is, if we get this far behind in the early stages we will never get through all the rounds of play we have to in time for our windup weekend (when all semi-finals and finals are played at Henderson Park in Oak Bay on Aug. 18 and 19).

Following the finals on the Sunday, trophies will be presented to the winners and runners-up in each event and there will also be a bonus prize of a new racquet, courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora for every champion. (Don't forget by the way, you can follow your progress in the tourney by popping into Centre Court Racquets where up-to-date draw sheets of all the events are posted).

But first, pop onto that court and get your matches played or there will be so many disqualifications and defaults that there will be hardly anyone left in!

Full first-round results and the draws for the second round will appear on the Times Sports Pages this time next week. In the meantime, we'll give you the few scores we do have.

And, if you played your first-round match some time ago yet have seen no result published to date, phone the Times newsroom Monday as your opponent may not have sent the card back.

FIRST-ROUND RESULTS

Men's singles: Joe Renz def. Stan Ogorek, 9-4; Larry Mais def. Ray O'Brien, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0; Kent Campbell def. Larry Christiansen, 9-7; Roman Spanier def. David O'Brien, 6-1, 6-2; Max Moran def. Adams, Metcalf shine for Argos

HAMILTON (CP) — Tony Adams and Terry Metcalf combined their respective passing and running talents Wednesday to lead Toronto Argonauts to a 14-9 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

The first pre-season outing of the 1979 season for both clubs proved entertaining for 19,247 fans and supported training-camp propaganda that the two clubs are considerably improved over last year's teams.

Adams went the distance as Argos head coach Forrest Gregg decided to take a good look at the former backup quarterback with Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

Adams did everything Gregg could expect from a player that has seen only limited action during the last four years, combining a mixture of passing with Metcalf's runs, which accounted for the lone Toronto touchdown.

Former Ticat Ian Sunter completed the Argos' scoring by kicking field goals of 37 and 31 yards, a 46-yard single and a convert.

Leif Pettersen scored the Hamilton touchdown on a seven-yard pass from rookie quarterback Ed Smith. Dave Marler, another rookie who will likely be the other Hamilton quarterback, booted a 35-yard single and convert, and Joe Perri added a 37-yard single to complete the Ticats' total.

Calgary rider best in trials

LEXINGTON, Ky. (CP) — Juliet Graham-Bishop of Calgary held on to the lead she established a day earlier to win the advanced division of the Kentucky horse trials over a modified world championship course Sunday, finishing the three-day competition with 31 penalty points.

YANKEE MANAGER'S SON WITH ARIZONA SOFTBALL SQUAD

Don't go sour on this Lemon

It may or may not mean anything to Victoria Budgets, but at least one set of "roots" on the Turquoise Kings' softball team stretches from Arizona to New York's Yankee Stadium.

Jim Lemon, part of the defence that helps stamp the Arizona team as the "most complete" squad to visit Victoria this season, plays second base. He happens to be the son of Yankee manager Bob Lemon.

Kings, who defeated the defending Canadian champion Budgets 1-0 in Arizona recently, may be "the most complete team to come into our Super Series schedule this season," says manager Jack Bell.

Kings have potent hitters, offensive and defensive speed and a standout 1-2 pitching punch. John Dawson, a pitcher imported from New Zealand, and six-four Jay Bob Bickford both started out the week with 24-3 won-lost records.

"It's going to be a good test," says Bell, for the Victoria team that will represent Canada at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico next month.

The Kings are 38-9 in their own league, rated as one of the strong ones in the U.S., and have won seven of the last 11 tournaments entered.

The Super Series, deviating from Victoria's usual weekend stand, opens tonight and winds up Friday at Royal Athletic Park. Both doubleheaders will start at 7 p.m.

An early start on playdowns

Seaboard Construction and Elks-Athletics — two of the three teams which will be battling for a berth in the British Columbia senior "B" championship July 12-15 in Vancouver — gave a sneak preview of the closeness of competition Wednesday night.

Seaboard, Elks-Athletics and Tally-Ho will play a double round-robin series starting Saturday at the same site to determine the Victoria representative in the provincial tournament.

The double round-robin district playdown gets under way at 1 p.m. Saturday with Seaboard facing Elks-Athletics in the opener. Elks then face Tally-Ho at 3 p.m.

In a game at Sooke, Ron Fedosenko threw a three-hitter and struck out 14 while Norm Goudie supplied a home run as K&R Sooke blanked Strandlund Brothers, 2-0.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Dave Sandy drove in two runs with a pair of doubles to lead Ingraham Hotel to a 4-2 victory over Remco Office Systems in a Heywood Men's League tussle.

At Hyacinth Park, Gina Olsen tossed a five-hitter as Butler Brothers blanked Island Dryco Breakers 2-0 while Sandy Milliken hurled a three-hitter and Laurie Skinner went four-for-four to spark VI 90 to a 10-1 victory over Strahtcona Stingers in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

DeGirolamo closing in on sixth city golf title

Dorothy DeGirolamo took a giant step forward Wednesday toward becoming a six-time winner of the Victoria district women's golf championship.

DeGirolamo, the defending champion from Gorge Vale, advanced to the semi-finals by easing past clubmate Shirley Naysmith, the only other five-time winner of the title, 6 and 4 at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

She was scheduled to meet Pat Derry of the host club in a semi-final battle earlier today.

Derry, who lost out to DeGirolamo in the final last year, advanced by defeating Maureen Hibberson of Uplands 3 and 2 while medallist Joanne Smith of Royal Colwood eliminated clubmate Florence Chapman 2 up and Diane Phillips of Uplands downed clubmate Bernice Breffitt, 3 and 2.

DeGirolamo, who has won four straight titles, played even par for the 14 holes Wednesday and was two-under for the five holes on the back nine.

She won the second and eighth holes for a 2-up lead at the midway point and opened up on the back five. After carding two bogeys on the front nine, she won the 10 with a birdie, 11 with a par, 13 with a birdie and 14 with a par.

DeGirolamo hasn't been beaten in the tournament since she first won in 1969. Dale Shaw, now a touring professional, won from 1970 to 1974 but DeGirolamo did not enter those years because of work commitments.

Chapman and Smith battled right to the 18th hole. Chapman was ahead after three holes but Smith held the lead after nine. Smith won the 17th and 18th after Chapman had pulled even on the 16th.

In consolation quarter-finals, Gert Pumfrey of Gorge vale topped Flora Kirker of Gorge 3 and 2, Janey Gudewill of Victoria ousted Marg McGowan of Royal Colwood 7 and 6, Kathy Maftechuk of Uplands bounced Marg Ubukata of Royal Colwood 5 and 3 and Myra McLean of Royal Colwood eliminated clubmate Thelma Bydal, 5 and 4.

Mahovlic shares top

Doug Mahovlic and Mike Parker of the host club are among the leaders after the first round of the Vancouver Island assistant professionals championship tournament at Victoria Golf Club.

Mahovlic carded a par 71 Wednesday to share first place with Ed Tougas of Fraserview while Parker recorded a 72 and is tied for third spot with Ray Stewart of Vancouver.

The tournament was scheduled to wind up up today.

GYMNASTS SHARP IN NETHERLANDS

Reeve Martin and Scott Hill led a strong showing by Victoria athletes on the Canadian team competing recently in the Netherlands national gymnastics championships.

Martin placed second all-around and Scott was third all-around while helping the men's team to a first-place tie with the Netherlands.

Another Victorian, Dwayne Pedersen, finished first on floor exercise and eighth all around.

Terry Mack of Victoria, despite an injury, placed seventh all-around in the girls' competition and guided Canada to a third-place finish in the team event.

All four gymnasts were from the John Herb Gymnastics Academy, which will be holding a summer camp starting July 2. Registrations for the camp close Friday and further information may be obtained by telephoning 386-0611.

Meadows leading

Glen Meadows edged Gorge Vale 5-4 at Victoria and benefitted from Cedar Hill's narrow victory over Uplands on Wednesday to move into first place in the tight Victoria and District Golf League competition for the Willie Park Driver.

Cedar Hill tripped Uplands, the leaders going into the third round, 5-4 at Royal Colwood to move out of the cellar while Colwood defeated Victoria 5½-3½ at Glen Meadows.

Marty Richards set the pace for Glen Meadows with a 4 and 3 victory over Stu Holroyd and paired with professional Bill Penny for a 3 and 2 best-ball win over Holroyd and Grant Milliken.

Richards was three under par at Oak Bay.

PITCHER RECALLED

Homer barrage fails

Farmer Construction launched a home run barrage that fizzled Wednesday and Lumberworld went on to score a 7-6 victory in Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League play at Lamrick Park.

George Pakos, Al Moir, Mike Baier and Ron Holmes all smashed home runs for Farmers, who tied the game in the seventh inning.

Batting leader Russ Holmes ruined Farmers' thunder by singling home the winning run in the eighth.

Gary Brooke, who was three-for-five, hit a double to start off the eighth for Lumberworld, advanced on a sacrifice by Dan Van Gylswyk and scored on Holmes' hit.

PROVINCE HONORS GYMNAST

Anthony Barker of Victoria received a special award from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis and was introduced in the legislature this week in recognition of his accomplishments at the B.C. Winter Games in February at Kamloops.

Barker, 16, who suffered from a bone disease in 1978, captured six gold medals and a silver in the tyro division of the men's gymnastics competition.

New Zealand in World Cup semis

LONDON (CP) — New Zealand became the first semi-finalist in the World Cup cricket tournament Wednesday by winning its second consecutive match.

New Zealand defeated Indian by seven wickets at Leeds while rain curtailed the remainder of the day's schedule, preventing play between England and Canada at Old Trafford and between the West Indies and Sri Lanka at the Oval.

At Nottingham, where rain interrupted play, Australia scored 17 for no wicket in reply to Pakistan's 288 for 7. The Australians, aleady beaten by England, needed a victory to stave off elimination.

The top two teams in each of two four-country groups qualify for the semi-finals after round-robin play.

New Zealand won its first match against Sri Lanka Saturday and is assured of a semi-final berth.

Wiser Canadians expect Pan-Am basketball medal

VENICE, Italy (CP) — Canada's national basketball team has headed home, much the wiser for its European tour and confident of a medal at the Pan American Games in Puerto Rico next month.

After a disappointing tournament, the team's confidence has been buoyed by three consecutive exhibition wins over the Italian national team.

Following an 88-64 loss to a Soviet Union club team last week to determine third place in the four-team tourney, head coach Jack Donohue observed: "That's the worst beating we've ever taken. We got our heads kicked in."

It also was the Canadian team's third loss in as many tournament games.

What turned the team fortunes around? Most feel it was the two-a-day workouts. Others were of the opinion several Canadians who played ineffectually in the tournament started worrying about their positions on the Pan-Am team.

Jim Zoet, seven-foot-two centre from Port Perry, Ont., and a tournament disappointment, put his game together. So did forward-guard Leo Rautins of Toronto.

The Canadians stormed over the Italians in their friendly matches, winning by margins of 12, 30 and 10 points before whipping an Italian club team 110-70 in their final tour game.

"We came here to prepare for the Pan-Ams and I think we've achieved all that we had hoped to," said team manager Ed Brown.

The team was having problems getting started home following the grounding of a number of DC-10s that left transatlantic seating at a premium.

There will be few new faces from the lineup that finished sixth at the world championship in Manila last year.

One newcomer, however, will be Drew Head, six-foot-11, from San Diego State. The Edmonton-born forward has lived most of his life in the United States and is familiar with the physical game that has proved so effective at international meets.

Making a return to the national team after absences of three years are Romel Raffin of Kitchener, Ont., and Phil Tollestrup of Hamilton.

They have been the most effective forwards on the Canadian team during the European tour and in one game scored half the Canadian points between them.

Raffin has been playing in Europe for several years while Tollestrup had retired until last fall when he was named coach of the McMaster University team in Hamilton.

The team will regroup June 19 before heading to Palm Beach, Fla., to work out in conditions they will encounter in Puerto Rico during July.

"I really think we've got a great chance for a medal," Donohue said, "but to me the date of April 18 is more significant because that's when the Olympic qualifying games begin in Puerto Rico."

Three teams from the Americas will qualify for the Olympics. The 1976 champion U.S. team qualifies automatically. Canada's chief competitors for a berth will be Puerto Rico, Brazil and Argentina.

Brad's bikes make going great

EDMONTON (CP) — Bicycles built for two? That's not Brad Proctor's style.

Proctor specializes in building custom bicycles, fashioned according to the whims and physical specifications of his individual customers.

The 28-year-old former auto machinist now is bike builder in residence at a small Edmonton cycle shop involved in manufacturing custom thoroughbred racing and touring bicycles.

If you've got the price — which may run up to $2,000 — Proctor will build you a bike from scratch that pampers your every whim.

"We measure the legs, upper body and arms, then use formulas to calculate the size of the bicycle frame and the angles of all the joints," he explains.

With these measurements, Proctor then consults his client on the smoothness of ride desired, the type of riding the customer plans to do and even the color he prefers.

With the frame complete, all fittings, from pedals and brakes to wheels and gears, can be handpicked by the prospective owner, with supplies from specialty houses throughout the world.

The finished product, weighing only between 4.5 and 8.5 kilograms, can cost between $500 and $2,000, depending on features and one's penchant for such goodies as titanium, carbon fibre and racing paint, which is a few grams lighter than conventional enamel.

Proctor says the extra dollars are more than justified by the beauty he will build you.

"I can build it exactly to your size and for exactly what you want to use it. And I can build it faster than you can import it."

His goal is 50 within a year.

"The filing and polishing and painting take a lot of time. If the buyer wants to do that part of it himself, I'll give him the advice he needs," Proctor says.

The extra effort can mean a saving of about 20 per cent on the cost of the frame.

Proctor, who picked up his knowledge of practical engineering while building top fuel dragsters, went into bike construction last March.

But things haven't yet picked up.

"It still takes me about 40 hours to make a frame. It's not even close to a living yet.

"So much is by eye and ruler. It's one of the few handcraft arts still left."

Challenge only value

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Two scientists at the University of Sherbrooke recently synthesized ryanodol, described as the most complex substance ever made in a laboratory, but they don't expect their success to make them rich.

In fact, they acknowledge that the substance is without commercial value — the task was undertaken because it was intellectually challenging.

In their 12 years of research, however, Pierre Delongschamps and Luc Ruest have not always been so esoterically inclined.

Delongchamps says his research has led him to a new theory on the structure of the molecule.

Ryanodol has a small molecule compared with many large proteins now regularly synthesized, but it is much more difficult to recreate since its carbon, hydrogen and oxygen atoms have an unusual and complex structure.

A mountain of history

TORONTO (CP) — In a field that he chose grudgingly, Donald Creighton has distinguished himself like no other historian in Canada.

Robert Fulford, editor of Saturday Night magazine, calls Creighton "the most towering figure in the writing of the history of Canada."

"He is a mountain range all by himself."

William Kilbourn, historian, author and one of Creighton's former students, says the historian has "the capacity of the greatest of epic poets, Dante, to capture in a couple of sentences the whole scene."

"He is a myth maker for this country."

The author of 11 Canadian historical works, Creighton has been a dominant figure for more than 50 years in Canada's intellectual mosaic.

But when he began his career in the 1920s, Creighton regarded Canadian studies as the ugly sister in the family of historical scholarship.

"Being a Canadian historian was a bad second best," he says. "I didn't like it."

After studying English and history at the University of Toronto, Creighton went to Paris to study European history.

"In those days there was no Canada Council to pay for students going anywhere," he says.

After existing on a diet richer in French history than in food, Creighton resigned himself to his fate.

Returning to Canada, he soon realized that most of the country's historical writers were boring.

"Canadian biographies have a formal official air as if they had been written out of the materials of a newspaper morgue or from the resources of a library largely composed of Blue Books and Sessional papers," he said 30 years ago.

Settling down to teach at the University of Toronto, he wrote his first book, The Empire of the St. Lawrence, which he still considers his best work.

"I got really lit up about it," he says. "I finished it in 1937 and by that time I was hooked on history."

Writing 10 more books since then, Creighton picked up three international fellowships — the Guggenheim, Rockefeller and Nuffield — eight honorary degrees and the Canada Council's Molson prize in recognition of "his distinguished contribution to the Canadian cultural heritage."

In the 1950s, he accused the United States of starting the Cold War with Russia.

Outraged Canadians tried to have him thrown out of the university.

"I was terrified a lot of the time," he says. "But Canadians were just following along after the Americans like little sheep."

Instead of firing him, however, the university promoted him to head its history department the following year.

The egg is nature's most efficient, streamlined shape. Now, the egg's unique, functional beauty has inspired the most innovative design in travel trailers in years: the Boler Egg.

Aerodynamically designed and built with light-weight fibreglass construction, the Boler Egg is the answer to today's ever-increasing demands for fuel economy.

1 The Boler Egg's solid fibreglass shell is tough, amazingly light-weight for easy towing.

2 Our Egg has a bright, roomy interior (completely insulated) with extra large windows. Most eggs don't.

3 It comes in two convenient sizes: Grade A Large 1300, and popular Extra Large 1700.

4 The Boler Egg has totally sealed construction. It's maintenance-free. And it never needs refrigeration (it has its own).

5 Our Egg rolls down the road with wide-track axle, engineered leaf-spring suspension, and 10" electric brakes.

6 Other eggstras: dual 20 lb. propane tanks, electric power converter, and two 14"x 14" roof vents for added ventilation.

Cut prices alarm law society

TORONTO (CP) — Many of Metropolitan Toronto's 6,000 lawyers are cutting prices as never before and while it may mean bargains for consumers who shop around, the Law Society of Upper Canada is cracking down on it.

The society has tightened some of its regulations because it fears that cut-rate quality, which could cause clients grief years or even decades later, goes along with cut-rate prices.

George Finlayson, society treasurer, said in an interview that price- cutting is the most persistent complaint the society gets from the profession.

Prices are being cut mainly in real estate law, so the society now requires that lawyers keep records of work done in closing a sale.

"They never used to keep records," says Finlayson. "We will be very severe with them. They will be suspended or disbarred if it is bad enough."

There is no set fee schedule for Ontario lawyers as there is for the province's doctors. The only exception is legal aid, used only by people unable to afford a lawyer. Legal aid pays senior lawyers $60 an hour and junior lawyers $48 an hour.

Otherwise, there are vast differences in legal fees charged for all kinds of transactions.

Hourly rates for general legal services can run from $50 for a lawyer in the suburbs working on his own to $200 for a senior lawyer in a downtown firm with 88 lawyers on staff.

A day in court could cost $400 or $1,400. An undisputed divorce case with no problems can cost between $300 and $600. The fee for closing an $80,000 house sale can range from $150 to $800.

A number of lawyers interviewed said that the public is doing more and more comparison shopping. Some said potential clients go so far as to play one lawyer against another, asking a price and then saying they can get the work done by someone else for $5 or even $50 less.

One of the reasons for the reduced prices may be the large numbers of lawyers, about 1,000, entering the profession each year. There now are 13,500 lawyers in Ontario — up from 4,902 in 1961 and 10,691 in 1976. About half are located in Metropolitan Toronto.

Another problem is the depressed state of the real estate market. Lawyers whose offices have been geared to handling real estate law are finding it harder to do business.

Many lawyers will drop prices on one item, using it as a loss leader, then hope the client will bring other more lucrative problems to them later.

Up to 60 per cent of negligence charges against lawyers are caused by mistakes they make in real estate deals and the premium rates for insurance have tripled in just a few years because of increasing numbers of claims. The minimum amount a lawyer requires — covering him for $100,000 — costs more than $400 a year.

Mistakes may not show up until clients sell their homes years later or try to take out a mortgage and find they cannot. There could be hundreds of reasons why the home they thought was their own is not theirs free and clear.

Travelling man 'can't retire'

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Travelling salesmen may one day only be a memory, but 60-year-old Myron Fletcher of Lethbridge intends to stay in the business.

"Travellers can't retire," says Fletcher. "It would kill them.

"The road is so hectic. I have to be doing something all the time. It gets into your blood. You have to keep moving."

The 25-year veteran of the road says he will continue to work part-time when he reaches retirement age. He sells clothing and dry goods for a Regina firm to a territory that covers Alberta and parts of Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

There are fewer travelling salesmen every day, he notes. Companies such as his are amalgamating and salesmen are getting bigger territories to cover.

"Old-timers are quitting. There are only five of us with more than 20 years left in Alberta. And I hope you don't mind my saying it, the younger ones are not doing the business that the older ones did. They won't work the hours."

Although Fletcher has succeeded in his job, he lacks what one veteran salesman describes as a necessity. That salesman told Fletcher he would never make it because he didn't drink.

Cancer scare laid to media

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Dr. Louise Lambert-Lagace, a leading dietitian who has a weekly television program on nutrition, has criticized the news media for coverage of stories about certain foods causing illness and disease.

Regarding the latest food scare — that vegetable fats processed into solids for margarine can cause cancer — the Montreal expert said the report on which the stories were based shows no one involved in the research as having said such a product could cause cancer.

Consumers should go to the source of the study, look at the data and the qualifications of the researchers involved, she suggested.

The researchers in the margarine study were employed by the dairy industry, which Dr. Lambert-Lagace said suggests that they might not be objective.

Iran Tomcats scratched

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canada has virtually given up hope of acquiring some of Iran's 77 F-14 fighter planes due in part to slow talks between the United States and Iran and to Prime Minister Joe Clark's pledge to move Canada's embassy in Israel to Jerusalem.

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said Wednesday he has abandoned the option of acquiring some of the F-14 Tomcat fighters from the Iranian Air Force.

"We've not made any progress at all with the contacts I've had in this matter and my hopes have dimmed on it," McKinnon told reporters. "It's very nearly a dead issue."

Last week, McKinnon unexpectedly announced he had discussed the possibility of acquiring the Iranian F-14 Tomcats through an arrangement with the United States.

Canada is committed to acquiring at least 130 new fighters to replace its aging air fighter fleet. It has $2.34 billion to spend on the planes and has winnowed the contenders to two — the McDonnell Douglas-Northrop F-18A and the General Dynamics F-16.

On Wednesday, however, McKinnon did not say whether that plan fell through because of Iranian opposition to Prime Minister Joe Clark's controversial decision to move the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

In an interview with Radio Canada earlier this week, McKinnon said, "With our present difficulties with the Arab world, I don't think that they (Iran) would sell us a bucketful of sand, let alone a special price on F-14's.

He said he had hoped to pay "a quarter to a third" of what Iran paid for the planes.

Grumman Corporation, manufacturer of the Tomcat, was thought to have offered new aircraft to Canada with a price tag of about $26 million each — the most expensive of six contenders.

"I'm afraid we're going to have to give up that option and go back to the drawing board with the other bids that were put in by the original six companies," McKinnon said, adding he was still considering two contenders.

He has stated he prefers having two different types of aircraft to fulfil Canada's commitment to NATO in Europe and North American Air Defence needs.

He said the single-engine F-16 would be better suited as a ground support-attack aircraft in Europe while the twin-engined F-18A could meet Canada's sovereignty needs.

TORONTO (UPC) — For a Toronto photographer Wednesday shooting a car for a newspaper automobile supplement turned out to be a hot assignment.

Mike Peake, a photographer for the Toronto Sun, took a new Ford Pinto demonstrator to the city's waterfront area to shoot some photos of the car, when he became aware of a strange odor emanating from underneath the dashboard.

"I smelled something funny, but at first I thought it was just a new-car smell," Peake said.

The 27-year-old photographer had just enough time to rescue his camera equipment before the car burst into flames.

"In about three minutes the whole thing was gone," he said. "I couldn't do anything. It was a real fireball, like an Indy 500 crash — the whole thing was involved in flames.

"The seats were burned right down to the metal, and all the windows were blown out."

Firemen blamed a wiring short-circuit for the blaze, but that was scant comfort to Ford of Canada Ltd., which had loaned the car to The Sun so the newspaper could write an assessment.

"It's embarrassing," admitted Ford spokesman Tony Fredo.

Speaker a problem

OTTAWA (FP) — A time-honored tradition of the House of Commons may be breached if James Jerome (Sudbury) does not continue as speaker.

The office of speaker is, by custom, alternated between anglophone and francophone members of parliament.

But Prime Minister Joe Clark has nobody in his caucus, aside from Supply and Services Minister Roch LaSalle, who qualifies. And LaSalle would not likely give up his cabinet post for the speaker's job.

Clark may have to actively seek a speaker from the ranks of the six-member Social Credit caucus, all francophones, or try to lure a francophone member of the Liberal caucus to take the post.

Whatever language the speaker uses, his deputy speaker is supposed to have great fluency in the other language. This also makes life difficult for Clark because he has no one except for a very few bilingual anglophone Conservatives who could take the deputy's job.

It's moving day for the Clarks

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark says goodbye to the silverfish and skunks of Stornoway today and hello to the gold china and hand-embroidered Madiera linen sheets that come with 24 Sussex Drive, the prime minister's official residence.

No longer will Maureen McTeer, Clark's wife, have to rush home from her law office to fix dinner — there will be a staff of eight or 10 to cook and serve the meals, make the beds, look after two-year-old daughter Catherine and keep the four-acre yard groomed.

These are just some of the perks that Clark will pick up when he moves into the 111-year-old, 35-room house furnished with antiques.

It's a definite improvement from nearby Stornoway, the official residence of the Leader of the Opposition, which suffered from poor plumbing, falling plaster, silverfish and a family of skunks which regularly crashed Clark's garden parties.

The department of public works, responsible for the two residences, is trying to rectify those problems before the arrival of the next occupants, Pierre Trudeau and his three sons.

The Clarks have more furniture now than when they moved into Stornoway in 1976 with only enough furniture to fill one vast den, an aide said.

Turfed out of office by voters on May 22, Trudeau loses not only his home of 11 years, but his controversial swimming pool and the beloved summer cottage at Harrington Lake in Quebec, which Trudeau once said made being prime minister worthwhile.

The $200,000 swimming pool, paid for by anonymous donors over the vociferous objections of Eastern Ontario Conservative Tom Cossitt, will be of little use to the new prime minister. Clark cannot swim because, he says, "my head sinks."

Business will be booming for interior decorators in the next fews months, as Clark and Trudeau redecorate their new homes to suit their tastes.

Ms. McTeer has already visited 24 Sussex Drive with close friend and interior decorator Cecilia Humphreys who is expected to get a government contract next week to redecorate the prime ministerial residence.

A public works spokesman said the pale beiges of the living room and orange and red wallpaper in the dining room apparently do not appeal to Ms. McTeer, who had the walls in Stornoway painted chocolate brown at a cost of $16,000.

However, a spokesman for Ms. McTeer said she is unlikely to do major redecorating on the scale commissioned by Margaret Trudeau. During his 11 years in office, Trudeau spent $385,000 renovating the home, public works figures show.

Veteran affairs to move to P.E.I.

OTTAWA (CP) — The transfer of the veteran affairs department to Charlottetown was approved by the cabinet Wednesday, only hours after Veterans Affairs Minister Allan McKinnon questioned the move.

McKinnon earlier had indicated to reporters the move was not "100-per-cent sure" and he planned a further review. After a cabinet meeting later he announced the decision had been made to proceed with the move.

While the veterans affairs minister wanted the review, State Secretary David MacDonald, a Prince Edward Island MP, told reporters before the cabinet meeting that the department transfer was backed by Prime Minister Clark and would go ahead.

McKinnon said after the cabinet meeting that "today with my cabinet colleagues and the prime minister the decision has been made that the department of veterans affairs will move to Prince Edward Island."

He said he announced the decision to "allay the uncertainty" in the department and in Prince Edward Island about the relocation.

Unemployment in the island and promises to locate some government agency there were major reasons for the cabinet decision, he said.

McKinnon said he was told the government would waste $1 million already spent on preparations for the move if the transfer was cancelled. The highest cost estimate for moving employees and building a new headquarters in Charlottetown is $39 million, he said.

The department plans to hire locally in Charlottetown to fill jobs left open by public servants refusing to move.

Clark names staff

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark has called on a selection of party faithful — long-time aides, defeated candidates and retired MPs — to appoint his personal staff.

Two former Conservative MPs and six former journalists are among the 15 official appointments to Clark's personal staff announced Wednesday.

Jean Pigott, an Ottawa businesswoman who lost her bid for re-election in Ottawa-Carleton in the May 22 general election, was named a senior adviser on human resources. She had been an MP since her by-election win in 1976.

James Gillies, an economist and university professor, served as MP for Toronto's Don Valley from 1972 to 1979 but chose not to run in the election. Throughout the campaign, Gillies acted as chief policy advisor to Clark, a position he will keep in the prime minister's office.

Clark named former press secretary Donald Doyle as assistant chief of staff: Doyle, a parliamentary reporter for Quebec City's Le Soleil from 1968 to 1975, will serve under Clark's chief of staff William Neville, the prime minister's chief advisor.

Clark said his new press secretary will be Jock Osler, a former reporter for the Calgary Herald and the Financial Times.

Abacus execs got $1. 8M cheap credit

EDMONTON (CP) — The Journal says Abacus Cities Ltd., a Calgary-based real estate development firm that now is in receivership, granted credit of $1,813,737 to its directors and senior company officials in the last nine years and that $1,614,256 was still outstanding in mid-April.

The newspaper says that information compiled by Abacus last month for a meeting of shareholders shows 19 directors and officials, including the president and the chairman of the board, received a variety of credit, some interest-free.

Abacus was placed in receivership when it was unable to meet a $500,000 demand loan called by the Bank of Montreal.

The company, with paper assets of almost $500 million, is being investigated by the RCMP, the Alberta Securities Commission and the federal insurance department.

The federal investigation is into the business relationship of Abacus and Fort Garry Trust Co. of Winnipeg, which provided financing for a number of Abacus projects.

Trading of Abacus shares, which sold for more than $7 at a high, have been suspended indefinitely on the Toronto and Alberta Stock Exchanges. Shares were selling for as low as $1.40 when the Alberta commission halted trading.

The largest amount of credit — made last year — was $602,000 to J. F. (Alan) Cornwall at five-per-cent interest to allow Cornwall to buy Abacus shares. Cornwall then was general manager of the central B.C. region for Abacus.

In total, Cornwall had $652,096 in credit, of which $641,000 was outstanding.

Abacus chairman Ken Rogers, a former board chairman, received $139,977 in credit, of which $131,274 was outstanding, including a $4,000 interest-free amount for personal use.

ANDRE
. . . helped buy house

William Rogers, board chairman, former president and Ken's brother, had been given $201,025 in credit. The largest sum was $177,006 at interest rates varying between nine and 13 per cent and was outstanding in mid-April. There was also $15,000 interest-free credit for personal use which has been repaid.

Former director Harvie Andre, the Progressive Conservative MP for Calgary Centre who resigned in May after six years as a director, received $31,468 in credit of which $14,606 was outstanding when the report was prepared. A credit of $12,700 was interest-free to help Andre buy a house.

The Journal says MIC Advisor Ltd., in which Andre had a 40-per-cent interest, received credit of $110,000 from Abacus and later a further $272,000 credit was granted to assist in formation and operation of MIC Advisor.

The document shows Abacus, registered as an Alberta company in 1970, paid $1,206,834 in remuneration during 1978 to directors and senior officers of Abacus and its subsidiary companies, almost twice the amount paid a year earlier.

Abacus lost $1.66 million in 1978 after showing a record profit of almost $9.5 million after taxes in 1977.

Abacus, which has been operating in Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario, saw its net earnings climb to $9.5 million in 1977 from $75,000 nine years earlier.

Abacus apparently ran into cash flow difficulties through a number of 1978 expansions, including the expenditure of more than $18 million for two Ontario real estate development companies.

Bankruptcies total 418 in April

OTTAWA (CP) — Government statistics released Wednesday show 418 businesses filed for bankruptcy during April. This compares with a March total of 536.

Personal bankruptcies were 1,335 during April compared with 1,704 in March. The total for both types in the first four months of the year was 8,113.

Of this total, 44 per cent were in Ontario and 33 per cent were in Quebec.

Most of the business that went bankrupt during April were in the wholesale and retail trade sector — a total of 141.

Outlook sunny for investments

OTTAWA (UPC) — Canada's investment climate is the best since December, 1976, due to higher profits and an improved employment outlook, the Conference Board in Canada forecast Wednesday in releasing its latest business survey.

The April survey of chief executive officers of 220 Canadian companies indicated that 58 per cent feel it would be a good time to invest in Canada, the independent research organization said.

Only 43 per cent felt the investment climate was opportune in the previous survey and 30 per cent a year ago. In the latest survey, only 13 per cent said it was not a good time to expand business operations.

And, the Board said, investment intentions reported by senior executives reached a new high of 64.5 per cent compared to 59.5 per cent in the previous survey and 50 per cent a year ago.

The Board said while most executives "do not forsee a sharp improvement in economic conditions," recent growth in demand and better profits are signs of economic improvement.

Most executives (65 per cent) said their company's profits had increased during the past six months. Only 10.5 per cent reported lower profits.

More than half of the businessmen said they expect employment to improve in the next six months while only 7 per cent expect a decline. Most felt unit costs for labor will remain the same.

Although demand for Canadian products was a major factor in limiting investment a year ago, the Board said only 29 per cent of the businessmen noted weak demand in the new survey.

Fluoride fallout inquiry launched by government

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal investigation has been launched into reports that fluoride pollution on Cornwall Island from a U.S. aluminum smelter has been killing cows, vegetation and impairing Indian health.

The action follows complaints by the National Indian Brotherhood that federal health officials have been aware of the problem for 18 months but have failed to act because of petty, bureaucratic reasons.

Health Minister David Crombie and Indian Affairs Minister Jake Epp said Wednesday that investigations have been started and a Crombie aide said his minister might visit the island to get a first-hand look a the situation.

The issue flared when a U.S. government dental officer confirmed Tuesday that Indian children showed signs of fluoride poisoning.

William Burns, responsible for all U.S. tribes east of the Mississippi River, said some of the 152 children on the island have stained and brittle teeth — the same symptoms displayed by cows that have died.

"They do have it," he said. "There's no doubt about it."

"It's pretty mild right now but increased exposure could have a real harmful effect."

Noel Starblanket, president of the Canadian Indian brotherhood, said a 1978 study by Bertram Carnow and Shirley Conibear, two American doctors, had already confirmed Indian fears that fluoride poisoning from the Reynolds Metals Co. aluminum plant in New York was drastically altering life on the Canadian island.

The Carnow-Conibear report said that more than 25 million pounds of fluoride had passed over or had dropped onto the island since the plant opened in 1959.

The cow population on the island had dropped to 177 from 364 during that time. Vegetation was burned off and the cattle had starved because their teeth wore down excessively to the point where even the pulp cavity was exposed.

The doctors recommmended an epidemiological study be carried out on the 1,200 Mohawk residents on the island located in the St. Lawrence River between the U.S. and Cornwall, Ont.

Starblanket said Indian and health negotiators have been unable to iron out an agreement by which the study could be carried out.

"They wanted the Indians of St. Regis to sign a contract that would give the federal health department the right to cancel the health project at any time for any reason." Starblanket said.

"In fact they wouldn't have to give a reason."

Starblanket said these same health department officials arbitrarily cut off health services six months ago.

"There's no reason to suggest they wouldn't do that."

Large amounts of fluoride can also cause crippling bone disease, respiratory illnesses, thyroid problems and other ailments.

Burns started seeing Indians from the St. Regis reserve six months ago after Ottawa stopped paying for Indian dental needs.

"It's an industrial pollution problem," said Burns, who indicated he will investigate the matter.

Minister learns about quotes

OTTAWA (CP) — International Trade Minister Michael Wilson learned one of the toughest lessons of politics Wednesday when he woke up to a television report quoting him as saying the new Progressive Conservative government is investigating the Bank of Canada.

Wilson, first elected to Parliament May 22 and made a cabinet minister last week, said in an interview that an offhand remark he made to a Toronto journalist Tuesday evening had been blown out of proportion.

Contrary to rumor and published reports, he said, no investigation of the bank's operations have been ordered or even suggested.

Wilson had been reported as saying the government was investigating allegations that the Liberals asked the Bank of Canada to "prop up the dollar" during the election campaign in an effort to paint a rosy picture of the economy.

He was also reported as saying Finance Minister John Crosbie was looking into the central bank's use of more than $1 billion of foreign currency reserves in May to slow the slide of the dollar on world money markets.

Wilson said he merely told the reporter, in reply to a question about actions the central bank had taken to support the dollar, that this was Crosbie's responsibility.

If anything is to be done in this area it is up to Crosbie, Wilson recalled saying.

TORONTO (CP) — Edper Equities Ltd. of Toronto and Montreal successfully completed its fight for control of Brascan Ltd. of Toronto today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said 10,098,209 shares of Brascan A stock were tendered to Edper on the Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver stock markets under an offer announced by Edper on May 30.

Richard ices thieves

MONTREAL (CP) — What would hockey great Maurice Richard use on a bright day in June to chase two purse snatchers? Not his skates.

His bicycle, that's what.

Montreal police say Richard was on the lawn in front of his home Wednesday when he heard a woman screaming and saw two boys trying to grab her purse.

The pursuit, as it happened, led them past police station 41 in the north end of the city. Richard stopped, went in and asked for help.

Lieut. Maurice Charbonneau and Sgt. Georges Miron zoomed out in a squad car and caught up with one suspect a block away. Charbonneau was about to take off after the second purse snatcher when he was hit by a passing car.

Police reported Thursday that he was in hospital with a broken leg, a broken collar bone, a broken thumb, and cuts and bruises. Otherwise, a spokesman said, Charbonneau is in good condition.

The second suspect was apprehended later.

Submersible firm sinking

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia company which helped pioneer manned submersibles is sinking fast and could be scuttled despite its respected storehouse of marine technology.

International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd. (Hyco) likely will cease operations June 30 and disband its staff of 45 unless there is a last-minute takeover bid for the 13-year-old firm.

"I don't think an industry like this should be allowed to go under," says Doug Huntington, company marketing engineer, "especially with Canada's offshore oil exploration commitments over the next decade."

Hyco was placed in receivership in October, 1978, and Dunwood and Co. has been unsuccessful in finding a buyer.

The company, which manufactures the Pisces, has established a world-class reputation as a builder of successful, relatively low-cost submersibles.

The Soviet Union operates two Hyco vessels for research purposes and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration of the United States is waiting delivery of the last two underwater vehicles now under construction.

Hyco has produced 15 commercial submarines, but a rise in the use of unmanned vehicles and poor marketing projections compounded company problems.

The company's financial problems are partly caused by a series of internal shareholder fights which prevented financial reorganization of the firm last year.

Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co. of London (P and O) is the biggest shareholder with 43 per cent of the stock. P and O loaned Hyco $850,000 in 1974 and has repeatedly tried to get some safeguards for its money.

Dissident Canadian shareholders last year said the loan should have been forgiven and alleged that P and O had defaulted on a purchase agreement with Hyco. Management tried unsuccessfully to award P and O preference shares in return for cancellation of the loan.

Hyco's troubles were aggravated by the collapse of the offshore oil exploration market.

The company was dealt a blow when P and O Subsea Ltd., a British firm, abandoned its North Sea oil and gas operations and put its Pisces submersibles for sale at a cut rate.

The submersibles, some of which are capable of diving to 6,600 feet, have been put to several uses, including undersea oil well drilling. The Pisces and other Hyco submersibles are capable of conducting seabed surveys, pipeline and cable inspections, plus salvage and submarine rescue operations.

Hyco had 165 employees two years ago and had received federal government financial help in the past. Future loans are unlikely, however, and the company's one remaining submersible still is for sale.

Posters stalk jogger rapist

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The poster bears the picture of a snub-nosed revolver. The black-lettered message is blunt: "You can't rape a .38. We will defend ourselves." Author unknown.

The poster is one of two types that has appeared recently in the Vancouver residential areas of Kitsilano and Point Grey as a warning potential rapists. Police have no idea who printed the bill.

The second type, put up by Vancouver Rape Relief, warns a specific rapist — whom the group says wears a gray jogging suit and has been labelled the "jogger rapist" — that his identity is known and encourages women to stand up to him.

"We're not connected in any way with the handgun poster and we have absolutely no idea who is behind them," Carol Nielsen of Rape Relief said in an interview Wednesday.

A police spokesman from the Point Grey area said they have no clue who is putting up the handgun posters. "But we'll charge him" because putting up signs in public places without permission contravenes a municipal bylaw.

Nielsen said her group came up with the idea of a poster campaign as a new tactic to scare the jogger rapist, who reportedly has raped one woman and attempted to rape two others in the area in the last six months.

She said his method of attack has been to wait at a bus stop in a car, then jog up behind his victim, put a neck hold on her and stuff a handkerchief in her mouth.

Job search leads to jail

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A 21-year-old New Westminster man who stole a pick-up truck to drive to Alberta to search for a job was sentenced in provincial court Wednesday to 45 days in jail.

James Patrick Sporar was also placed on probation for 12 months after being convicted of possession of stolen property.

Court was told that Sporar and William Edward Simon, 19, also of New Westminster, were intoxicated when they stole the truck in New Westminster earlier this month and headed for Alberta.

Court finds doctors, hospitals blameless in negligence case

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court has cleared two doctors and two hospitals of negligence charges filed by a North Vancouver couple who claimed more than $2 million for brain damage to their baby.

The Bissells wanted to maintain Darren at home and Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie said they asked for damages sufficient to provide a full-time staff, highly-specialized equipment and an adequate house.

Darren was delivered prematurely by Caesarean section Feb. 19, 1976. His mother, then 29, had been taking birth control pills and the pregnancy was not planned. At the time of delivery she was on medication for active pulmonary tuberculosis and diabetes.

After the birth, Darren was found to have a bowel blockage and suffered from low blood sugar from excessive insulin.

He was operated on at Vancouver General Hospital by Dr. Kliman who corrected the bowel problem but the baby developed an upper respiratory infection which the parents said was caused by negligence by the doctor and the hospital.

The parents claimed negligence against Dr. Turton for not making a house call March 28, 1976.

Mr. Justice McKenzie said the hospitals and doctors could apply for costs if they wanted.

Second union torpedoes Pacific Press settlement

VANCOUVER (CP) — A second union at Pacific Press has rejected a contract offer to end the strike-lockout that has shut down Vancouver's two daily newspapers since Nov. 1.

The 60-member Wholesale Drivers Union rejected the proposal by 84 per cent.

A union spokesman said Wednesday the drivers are unhappy with the length of the contract which calls for a 35 per cent wage increase over 40 months.

The Printing Pressmen's Union voted Sunday to reject the tentative settlement reached early Saturday after also objecting to the term of the contract and the money.

Two small unions, the 34-member engravers union and the 86-member mailers union, voted earlier this week to accept the package.

Meanwhile, the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild which represents 800 of Pacfic Press's 1,400 employees, began voting Wednesday.

The sixth union, the typographers, will vote today. Under the joint council, a settlement is not possible if one union rejects an offer.

There had been suggestions earlier that if the pressmen were the only union to reject the tentative contract, the provincial government could invoke a section of the provincial labor code that would force a majority vote of all union members and end the ability of one union to stand in the way of a settlement.

The contract would increase the base rate for senior reporters to $530 a week before it expires in February, 1982. Top craft rates would go to about $520.

Atkey orders review

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The deportation of Chilean seaman Galindo Madrid, who fears death at the hands of his country's police, hangs in the balance after Immigration Minister Ron Atkey ordered an unexpected review of his case.

Madrid, who jumped ship and sought political asylum earlier this year, learned Wednesday that a deportation order against him is to by reviewed by the minister.

No explanation was offered by local immigration officials for the surprise development in Marid's two-month fight to avoid deportation. It came less than 24 hours before he was due to be put on a plane for an unspecified destination.

Lawyer Stewart Rush, who has been representing Madrid, said he spent more than an hour talking on the telephone to federal immigration officials in Ottawa. The minister's decision came several hours later.

Victim identified

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — RCMP have identified Mark Shane Fabrizio, 24, of Seattle, Wash., as the man killed Monday when the single-engine charter float plane in which he was flying alone crashed about 40 kilometres north of here.

600 locked out

SURREY (CP) — Surrey school board served lockout notices Wednesday on 600 non-teaching employees at 80 schools effective June 28, a move that may place summer school programs in jeopardy.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, were locked out after the board rejected the union's contract demands, a board spokesman said.

The employees involved include typists, janitors, outside workers and bus drivers.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said it is too early to tell if essential service legislation would be invoked to end the dispute.

Chiros up in arms

The chiropractors are attempting to get McClelland to help them obtain access to patient's x-rays. Authorized technicians have been withholding x-rays of patients from chiropractors in the Interior because of a British Columbia Medical Association directive.

Contract stamped

CRANBROOK (CP) — City council voted Wednesday to approve a two-year contract agreement already agreed to by more than 100 outside civic workers here.

A spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees said the contract, retroactive to March 1, will increase the base rate to $8.11 an hour when it expires in March, 1981. The current base rate is $6.72 an hour.

The city also will pay 100 per cent of the cost of a medical plan.

CHRETIEN
. . . loss of millions

OTTAWA (CP) — Apparently relishing his chance to give the new government a taste of its own medicine, former Liberal finance minister Jean Chretien bounded into caucus today bellowing:"For the Bay Street wonder, it's a hell of a blunder."

The "Bay Street wonder," he told reporters is Prime Minister Joe Clark, whom he accused of backtracking on all the promises he made during the campaign.

Clark's biggest blunder so far, Chretien said, was his controversial plan to move the Israeli Embassy to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv.

"It was stupid. If you can't deliver you should shut up," Chretien said.

"Are we moving or not moving? Nobody knows."

He said businessmen on Bay Street, the centre of Toronto's financial district, are confused about Clark's stand on this and other policy statements made during the campaign.

Chretien said he had heard that Westinghouse Canada Ltd. stands to lose a large contract with Libya because of the proposed shifting of the embassy. Loss of the contract would cost 200 Canadian jobs, Chretien believed.

Other companies remain worried about losing business in the Middle East.

One major company said Clark's pledge was a "stab in the back." Another said even Clark's notice of intent was enough to hurt Canadian companies vying against fierce foreign competition in the rich Middle East.

"We are talking about billions of dollars potentially," said Peter Miller, vice-president of marketing for the Calgary-based international division of Atco Ltd. "Even if the decision is taken back, some damage has been done."

Government officials estimate Canada could lose up to 55,700 jobs, more than $800 million in exports and almost 50 percent of its Middle East crude oil imports if Arab countries retaliate.

The largest contract held by a Canadian company in the Middle East is Bell Canada's $1.5 billion agreement to upgrade telecommunications in Saudi Arabia. Saudi officials have already warned the contract was in jeopardy.

Bell Canada sent a delegation headed by company president James C. Thackray to Ottawa Wednesday to meet with Federal Economic Development Minister Robert de Cotret.

A spokesman for de Cotret declined to discuss any details of the meeting except to say it lasted an hour and was initially requested by Bell Canada executives. Bell Canada officials declined comment also.

Bell was in the process of expanding its Saudi contract to $3 billion and a company spokesman said "there is too much at stake to continue to make headlines."

Roger Banister, president of Banister Continental Ltd., said, however, the embassy move "is like taking a bet where you have everything to lose and nothing to gain.

"We think out west Trudeau didn't give us all the support our international competitors had. We elected a Conservative government and the first thing they do is stab us in the back. That's what's disappointing about it."

Banister's Edmonton-based pipeline company did $60 million to $70 million in business in the Middle East over the last four years and now has outstanding bids in Libya and Iraq for contracts worth $200 million.

Another concerned company was Atco Ltd., reputedly the biggest supplier of prefabricated buildings in Saudi Arabia. Atco International did $250 million worth of business in the Middle East last year.

Miller said Atco was heavily involved in the prefabricated housing industry, particularly in construction camps.

The Atco vice-president said he could not put a price tag on some of the enormous projects underway, but corporate competiton was so fierce that it "only takes something like this to swing the pendulum."

In Montreal, Jean-Claude Viliard of Lavelin Inc., involved in a $150 million project to conduct an aerial agricultural survey in the United Arab Emirates, said his company was concerned about future Middle East contracts.

"The government's decision, though it's been delayed, certainly doesn't help much," Viliard said. "We've opened a permanent office in Rhyad so we're hoping to enhance our presence there."

Robert Kaplan, Liberal MP for York Centre, said he sees no way Clark can get out of the embassy predicament gracefully.

One of the few Jews in Parliament, Kaplan did not express either support or opposition to the government's plan to move the embassy.

Behold the amazing kiwifruit

You have probably seen it before and wondered what that furry, egg-shaped thing was all about.

Maybe you've heard about it and said what kind of fruit could a kiwifruit be.

For people who know little or nothing about New Zealand kiwifruit, this summer offers a great opportunity to try one of the newest and most delicious fruits on the market.

Kiwifruit, which is loaded with Vitamin C and is low in calories — just 55.5 to an average-sized Kiwifruit — is available in Canada from May through November.

Underneath its fuzzy brown skin is a brilliant emerald green fruit dotted with tiny black seeds. Kiwifruit, except for the skin, is completely edible, will stay firm up to six months with proper storage and adds glorious color to salads, desserts and your favorite meat.

If the fruit is very firm, place it in a plastic bag with an apple or pear and store at room temperature. This will ripen the Kiwifruit in a day or so.

It can be served as a breakfast fruit, with yogurt, custard or cheese, or if you are adventurous, with a dash of brandy, a sprinkling of kirsch or in a gin and tonic.

3 egg whites
1 cup sugar
1 tsp. vinegar
½ tsp. vanilla
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1 cup whipping cream
3 kiwifruit

Preheat oven to 120°C. Have egg whites at room temperature for best results. Beat egg whites to a stiff foam, then gradually beat in the sugar. Continue it for about 5 minutes until sugar has dissolved. Beat in vanilla and cream of tartar.

Spoon the meringue onto a foil lined baking sheet, making a seven inch diameter circle or spoon the meringue into a springform pan. If it is baked in a springform pan, the top will be crisp and the sides and center will be soft. The top and sides will be crisp and the center soft if baked on a baking sheet. (If you spray the foil with a non-stick substance, it will release the meringue more easily.) Bake at 250°F/120°C for one hour. Turn off heat and cool in oven for 2 hours.

If your oven heats well, you can turn it off after the initial 15 minute baking period and let the Pavlova just sit there for at least an hour . . . or overnight if you want a really dry Pavlova. Remove from oven and carefully invert the meringue onto a serving plate, peeling off the foil. Don't be dismayed if your Pavlova falls slightly and cracks — this is normal. Spread meringue with whipped cream and top with slices of New Zealand Kiwifruit. Serves 6.

How to name your poison

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers, puzzled by the seemingly incomprehensible list of additives on food packages, now have a useful guide to consult.

It is a handbook called Additive Alert, written by Linda Pim, 26, an environmental biologist.

The 116-page guide, published by Doubleday and available at $2.95, is designed for easy reference and is aimed at helping shoppers avoid additives which are considered most potentially harmful.

Pim, ~~a graduate of~~ University of Toronto, stresses that not all additives are, as she terms them, "badditives."

She says that some, such as preservatives, can serve a useful function. But she says others, such as the coloring agents found in cheese and orange peel, are unnecessary and possibly harmful.

Additive Alert, a project of the Pollution Probe Foundation, is the first publication aimed at a Canadian audience.

It outlines the types of food additives, says which may be unsafe and explains Canada's food laws. And it also tells readers whom to write if they are concerned about the additives in their diet.

Additivies have been in wide use since the Second World War.

Statistics Canada says about three-quarters of the food consumed in North America undergoes some sort of chemical transformation by the time it reaches the dinner table.

Additives are used to give foods color, texture and flavor as well as to make them last longer on the shelf.

But as the use of additives grows, so does the controversy over their safety. Additives have been linked to cancer, allergies, hyperactivity, neurological disorders and liver damage.

Some experts maintain that the small amount of additives permitted in foods is not hazardous. Other experts say the risks are not always related to the size of the dose of the chemical.

Some cancer scientists conclude that if tumors result at high doses, they will also appear at low doses.

There's also the question of the "witches' brew" effect or what happens when additives interact. A Science Council report says it is becoming increasingly clear that a level of exposure to a certain substance may be free of risk under one set of circumstances but not under another.

We can be as fit as our ancestors

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Dr. Jean Mayer
Dr. Johanna Dwyer

When anthropologists began studying the Eskimos, aborigines and other such primitive societies, they were surprised to find the the word "work" did not exist in their languages.

They finally realized that the lives of these primitive peoples were so filled with hunting, fishing and other labor necessary to survive that, to them, being awake was the same as working.

It's a different story in our technological society. Although we have many words for work, few jobs today entail the hard physical labor that was associated with the work of our ancestors, even though we may feel just as exhausted at the end of the day. And herein lies the root of our most common health problems — overweight.

To avoid gaining unwanted weight, we must use up all the calories consumed. To a large degree, the number of calories we need is determined by our respective levels of physical activity. For example, a sedentary man weighing about 150 pounds will use up about 2,700 calories a day, according to the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Research Council. A moderately active man of the same weight will require about 4,000 calories a day, while one who is engaged in heavy labor — say a lumberjack or a long-distance runner who is in constant training — will need 6,000 or more.

In addition, our appetite is, to a large degree, attuned to our level of energy expenditure. Appetite increases as we increase our level of physical activity and decreases when we are less active. But this is less true at the two extremes of physical activity. When you exercise to the point of exhaustion, such as training for a marathon — the appetite-satiety mechanism of the brain cannot keep up with the body's increased demand for food, and a loss of weight may be the result. At the other end of the activity scale, the appetite may outpace the needs of a very sedentary person, and the result will be an increase in weight.

As might be exected, other factors are involved. Body type, for example, is important. Persons with large bones and muscles and a generally stocky build (mesomorphs), usually find they must exercise more than their more elongated peers, or ectomorphs, who have smaller builds and long narrow hands and feet.

It would apear, then, that one of the best ways to control weight is to maintain a reasonable amount of physical activity. Unfortunately, many of us simply do not realize just how sedentary our lives tend to be. All we need to do is contrast a typical job of today with that of typical Americans at the turn of the century. Most people lived on small farms, and both husband and wife (as well as their children) worked from dawn until after dusk, caring for farm animals, fields and the house. It was hard, calorie-consuming labor. In the cities, factory workers also put in long, hard days. Sundays — the only day of rest — would be spent walking to church, often followed by a long ramble in the woods on a balmy afternoon or ice-skating in winter.

Although we eat less than these hard-working ancestors, our lives also are much less demanding, at least in terms of calories expended. An executive who weighs 165 pounds will expend only about 470 calories in a typical day, even though it may be very high-pressure and emotionally draining. A 110-pound secretary may be slightly more active than her boss, but even so, needs only about 400 to 600 calories for her typical eight-hour work day.

How, then, can we arrange our lives to keep food consumption and physical activity in balance? Part of the answer is to eat nutritious, low-calorie foods. Many forward-looking companies are offering such choices in their cafeterias or employee dining rooms — things like salad bars, low-fat yogurt, cottage cheese and tasty soups. There are a growing number of vending machines that offer fresh fruits, juices and low-fat milk instead of (or in addition to) the usual fare of soft drinks, cookies and candy bars.

An increasing number of people are taking brown-bag lunches to work, and these can be filled with fresh fruits, vegetables and sandwiches made with sliced chicken and other low-calorie fillings. For those who eat out, there are numerous restaurants that offer soups and salads and other light lunches. Even in top executive circles, mineral water is catching on as a substitute for a martini or some other high-calorie alcoholic beverage.

You can also try to move around a bit more on the job. Walk up those two or three flights of stairs instead of always taking the elevator. Take a brisk walk to the newsstand at lunch instead of having the paper delivered. If possible walk or bike to work instead of driving. If your company has an exercise room take advantage of it. If it doesn't, suggest to management that this would be a welcome fringe benefit. While we will never be as active as our hardworking ancestors, with a little effort and planning we can still achieve their lean and fit physiques.

Sounds hard but it's not

During the strawberry season, the most famous restaurants all over the world invariably feature the classic combination of fine, fresh strawberries, orange juice, curacao and cream known as Strawberries Romanoff.

You need not be intimidated by Strawberries Romanoff even though it's a favorite of the royal and great chefs of Europe. It is remarkably easy to whip up this glorious dessert in a flash and refrigerate it for your own dinner party. Best of all, with California strawberries in season almost all year round in local supermarkets, you can prepare this delicacy often.

To prepare, just marinate fresh whole strawberries in sugar and orange liqueur, chill and serve in stemmed glasses. The topping is sweetened whipped cream with more pureed berries for extra flavor. A whole strawberry with stem intact makes a pretty garnish.

Strawberries Romanoff is the perfect dessert for a summer dinner party, and a perfect way to enjoy the delicious strawberries in our markets this summer. Whether you serve them a la Romanoff or au natural, fresh strawberries always give you the royal treatment.

Strawberries Romanoff

6 tbsps. sugar
⅓ cup orange flavored liqueur
2 pints whole fresh strawberries, washed and stemmed
1 cup whipping cream, whipped stiff and sweetened to taste

In bowl combine sugar and liqueur. Reserve four berries for garnish; add remaining to bowl, tossing gently to coat. Marinate in refrigerator one to two hours. Puree enough marinated berries to make one cup; fold into whipped cream. Spoon remaining berries and juice into four stemmed glasses. Top with whipped cream; garnish with reserved whole fresh berries. Makes four servings.

Summertime and the living is easy…and I have discovered a wonderful little booklet available from SIFTO® SALT that is going to make my Summertime entertaining so much easier. It's called Greens 'N Things and it contains all you need to know about the selection, care and preparation of salad greens and it's absolutely FREE! Simply write to: Sifto® Salt, P.O. Box 7213, Postal Station A, Montreal, Quebec H3C 2Z2. I made this delicious salad from their recipe book and my family raved about it for weeks.
Greens 'N Things
Cauliflower Salad with Chives and Capers. 1 head cauliflower; 6 pimiento stuffed olives; 4 pitted ripe olives; 3 tbsp. olive or vegetable oil; 2 tbsp. wine vinegar; 1 tbsp. capers; 1 tbsp. chopped parsley; 1 tsp. SIFTO® Salt; freshly ground black pepper; curly lettuce leaves. Wash cauliflower and cut into flowerets. Cook in 1 inch of boiling salted water 6-7 minutes or until just tender. Drain well. Place in a shallow dish. Cut olives lengthwise into fine strips and add to cauliflowerets. In small bowl mix remaining ingredients except lettuce. Spoon over cauliflowerets; cover and refrig[illegible] basting occasionally with marinade. To serve, line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves. Fill with cauliflower. Spoon olives and dressing over flowerets. 4 Servings. SIFTO® Salt where all good food begins.

DOCTOR FOWLER'S

THE COCKROACH (AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT HIM)

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Cockroaches. They're the red brigades of the kitchen cupboards; an ugly and unloved army left over from the Dark Ages when dirt and disease ruled supreme.

They're enough of a problem to keep exterminators in business year-around, says Bob Miller, pesticide specialist for the local provincial ministry of environment office.

The bugs usually are imported into the home in bags of groceries, bulk orders of food or in cases of beer or pop, he says.

Sometimes they simply crawl in on their own.

Roaches may be evil, but they can be overcome, Miller said in a recent interview.

He says the best way to prevent an infestation is to keep the house clean. Keep garbage outdoors, wash the dishes promptly and keep a jump on crumbs, scraps and spills.

There are a number of spray and powder insecticides on the market that a householder can use to get rid of cockroaches safely and effectively by carefully following directions.

But to ensure the job is done properly the first time, Miller advises that a licenced exterminator be used.

It costs between $25 and $50 to have an average, six-room house debugged professionally, he says.

Silverfish share the same habit and diet preferences as cockroaches, but they are most prevalent in apartment buildings, Miller says.

They often infest the building before it is completed, hitching a ride on construction materials, wallpaper or in cardboard boxes.

They love starch. As their name suggests, silverfish have a silver sheen and when they wriggle along the floor.

Their slender, scaley exterior camouflages a hardy constitution that enables them to survive up to 300 days without food.

Agriculture Canada recommends the best way to prevent an infestation is to vacuum and clean a house often and thoroughly. They also advise that stored books and clothing should not be left undisturbed for long periods and that trash should not be accumulated.

Silverfish like to eat the sizing on cottons and synthetics, so it is advisable to hang these clothes outside occasionally.

She knows the price score but her lips are sealed

OTTAWA (CP) — Beverly Ensom knows where to find the best food deals in Ottawa, but she's not allowed to say where they are.

She also has the inside track on where the cheapest gas stations are, and which neighborhoods have the most frequent gas-price wars.

Over the last 2½ years, Ms. Ensom, 28, has seen all the sales, the loss-leaders, the managers' specials and the in-store promotions.

She knows whether they mean real savings or are just advertising gimmicks — but her lips are sealed.

Once a month, the four part-time and three full-time staff head out to local shopping centres, gas stations, garages, tobacco shops and milk stores to check prices to be added to the nearly 100,000 prices collected across Canada for the monthly CPI.

Because of Statistics Canada's rules of confidentiality, none of the prices can be made public. Ms. Ensom is reluctant to discuss even general trends.

The CPI survey, conducted by staff at eight regional offices, is one of the department's best-known publications. Most economists say it is a useful tool, and politicians from both sides of the House of Commons cite it frequently in debates.

But the average consumer finds it hard to fathom the worth of the exercise. Why spend hundreds of thousands of dollars each year to find out what the individual knows every time he opens his wallet — that everything costs more these days.

For millions of Canadians, however, the difference between a one-half-per-cent and a one-per-cent increase in the monthly CPI determines how much bread they'll have on their table next month.

Pensioners, divorcees, some union members, the unemployed and even some senior executives are covered by contracts, alimony agreements or legislation containing cost-of-living clauses based on the CPI.

The federal government also uses the index to set personal income tax exemption levels.

Although it is used frequently to determine such cost-of-living increases, Statistics Canada officials stress that the CPI is a price index, not a true measure of the cost of living.

"What the CPI is interested in is price movements, not recording price levels in relation to income," says Denis Desjardins, assistant director of StatsCan's retail prices and living costs branch.

The CPI shopping basket includes 638 separate items, from rent to cigarette prices.

Critics say the major flaw in the CPI is that it measures inflation, but doesn't show the real impact of rising prices on different groups across the country.

They say the sampling is heavily weighted toward the middle class.

Because the CPI decides what stores to survey largely on the basis of sales volume, groups such as the Social Planning Council feel that large shopping centres are over-represented.

They say it is common practice for grocery stores in low-income neighborhoods — where there is less competition and customers are less mobile — to have generally higher prices.

StatsCan officials are trying to tackle the shortcoming.

SAVORY STEAK JARDIN

Serve with: Spinach-Mushroom Salad ● Whole Wheat Rolls ● Bavarian Cream with Cherry Sauce

- 1 pound trimmed, tenderized, boneless beef round steak
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed Cheddar cheese soup
- ¾ cup beef broth
- 1½ teaspoons garlic salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 cups each sliced carrots and celery
- 3 cups hot cooked rice

Cut meat into thin narrow strips. Brown on all sides in hot butter. Add onions and saute until tender crisp.

Stir in soup, broth, and seasonings. Add carrots. Cover and simmer about 20 minutes or until meat is tender. Stir in celery and cook 10 minutes longer.

Makes 6 servings. Calories per serving: 345.

According to popular legend, California's first raisin harvest was the result of a natural calamity, rather than careful human planning.

About 100 years ago, a severe heat wave struck the San Joaquin Valley, shrivelling most of the grapes before they could be harvested. One venturous farmer took his accidental raisin crop to San Francisco, where a grocer agreed to sell it. Raisins soon gained in popularity.

Questions You've Been Raisin . . . and Our Answers is a free folder that offers the reader some statistical data on the industry in California. The folder also contains nutritional information on raisins, as well as a list of 20 great ways to use raisins.

The Celsius temperature scale is probably one of the simplest aspects of the metric system. Water freezes at 0° Celsius, while 20° C. is room temperature, and 30° C. is a hot summer day. If the temperature is -10° C., then you might consider the weather ideal for skating. At -30° C. you could have trouble starting your car.

Your Handy Metric Handbook is a free booklet that will help the reader to learn and use the metric system. At the present time, the metric system is employed by 98 per cent of the countries in the world.

She loves eating

VONORE, Tenn. (AP) — For most women, the measurements 44-32-48 are not considered trim.

But they are joy for food-a-holic Gwen Hunt. A school teacher and weekly newspaper columnist, she got down to those measurements from 88-80-96.

"Can you imagine being 32 years old and never having a date, never being able to buy even a dress or never being able to cross your legs? Well, that (was) yours truly," she wrote recently in the Monroe County Advocate.

Miss Hunt, now 44, described in detail her battle against obesity. From a peak of 403 pounds in January, 1965, she reduced to 210 and found a whole new life.

"When I was 12 years old," she wrote, "I weighed 240 pounds. Mother and Mrs. Mary Underwood made all of my clothes. These had to be made without pattern, of course.

"Did this bother me? Never. I was happy all of the time. I took teasing . . . like water off a duck's back. It didn't bother me.

She spent six weeks in hospital in 1965. The doctors put her on a 500-calorie-a-day diet. Back home she kept the diet for a year and lost about 200 pounds.

"I bought clothes, tied my own shoes and wore a girdle," she wrote. "My measurements went from 88-80-96 to 44-32-48. You say that's still way too much. To me it was pure joy. Finally, I actually had a date . . .

"I've spent the years since then yo-yoing. I don't panic until I get to 300 pounds.

"Would I change my life if I could? Not one precious minute of it. You see, God blesses fat people. They have a big heart and lots of love to share. I'd never change that."

. . . He loves only health food

TORONTO (CP) — Fifty-five years ago they called Gayelord Hauser a food faddist and health nut.

Now, he says, they call him a hero.

Hauser, 84, author of Look Younger, Live Longer, a book based on balanced nutrition, said in an interview that the secret of his longevity "is simply that I've trusted nature more than I do chemists.

"The fountain of youth springs from balanced nutrition. That includes fish, chicken, lean meat, cottage cheese and lots of fruit and vegetables."

Hauser, a pioneer among natural health food evangelists, has advised celebrities, more than 40-million readers of his 20 books, and audiences on the lecture circuit for six decades about the benefits of such staples as yogurt, wheat germ, brewer's yeast, vegetable juices and blackstrap molasses.

"The three big enemies are sugar, fat and salt," he said. "And avoid freak diets like the plague. People who go on strange diets become strange, or starve to death.

"Believe it or not, I intend to live to be 100."

He keeps trim by walking at least an hour and swimming for half an hour every day.

An accomplished mimic, Hauser takes delight in imitating the celebrities he has met.

Mahatma Ghandi he recalls as "a wisp of a thing — the only man I know who didn't have to reduce."

"But I was amazed by his vitality. I asked Ghandi: What do you eat? He replied with a thin screech, 'I eat innocent food — goat's milk, dates, yogurt and vegetables.' "

Winston Churchill, who joined him in a special Hauser lunch at Lady Elsie Mendl's villa in Versailles in France, ordinarily scorned such health victuals.

"Winnie did everything wrong," said Hauser. "He loved his liquor, smoked like a chimney and paid no attention at all to his food.

Cancer detection speeded up

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

A new technique may assure earlier treatment of cancers of the breast.

Mammography is responsible for the early diagnosis of cancer of the breast. The procedure has been modified so that there now is about a 40 per cent greater diagnostic accuracy. Dr. Edward Sickles, of the University of California in San Francisco, refers to the technique as "magnification mammography." Besides reducing the number of biopsies for non-cancerous tumors, the technique will allow earlier detection in malignant, or cancerous lesions.

Even though the x-ray doses may be a little higher, Dr. Sickles believes that the radiation dose is justified for one-time use among those women whose diagnosis is not completely clear.

This new variation of mammography is said to be superior to the conventional technique, especially for the detection of small cancers of the breast. As with all new modifications, this procedure will be carefully evaluated before it is universally used.

The relationship between the emotions and physical symptoms is well established and undeniable. A new extension of this relationship was stressed at the International College of Psychosomatic Medicine.

It was emphasized that emotional stress, anxiety, depression and feelings of guilt may often be tied up with distressing skin conditions. Marked itching, skin rashes and allergic dermatitis are commonly related to adverse emotional states.

The special emphasis on this relationship was made in order to bring to the attention of doctors that combined treatment for such psychologically based skin problems should be made by both the psychiatrist and the dermatologist.

Narcolepsy is a disabling condition. Sufferers from narcolepsy suddenly fall asleep at any time of the day. They simply have no control over this involuntary need for sleep. It is easy for anyone to project oneself into the social problems that arise in people who have this problem. Dangers, too, while driving a car or while at work, are apparent.

A new drug, gammahydroxy-butyrate, shows enormous promise for the treatment of narcolepsy. Dr. Mortimer Mamelak, of Sunnybrook Medical Centre in Toronto, and his colleagues, believe that this new drug may become the treatment of choice for narcolepsy.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a waitress with a complaint I'll bet you've never heard before. Some customers tip according to how they like the food!

Yesterday I had a really bad day. Our regular chef was off, and we had a substitute. I served dinner to a quiet, middle-aged couple, and when they left, the man said, "I'm only tipping you a dollar because the food was lousy."

I said, "But the service was OK, wasn't it?" And he said, "Yes, the service was okay, but the food was lousy," and with that they walked out.

Abby, please tell people that the waitress has to serve whatever she picks up in the kitchen. And it takes just as much effort to serve a lousy meal as it does to serve a good one.

LOW TIPS

DEAR LOW TIPS: Most people tip according to their moods. Even though it's grossly unfair to the waitress, if she serves a lousy meal she's in very much the same position as the messenger who gets shot because he delivers bad news.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I need a solution to a very sticky problem. A couple we knew as neighbors several years ago in another city still regard us as their "dearest" friends although we never felt especially close to them. (We have kept up a Christmas card contact.)

They wrote saying, "We would love to visit you this summer and can arrange our vacation accordingly. Which week would be convenient for you to have us?"

Abby, at no time did we invite them to be our houseguests, but that is obviously what they have in mind. We wouldn't mind entertaining them for one evening at dinner, but we certainly don't want them staying with us.

We hate to hurt their feelings and we don't want to make up any lies we might get caught in, such as . . . "illness in the family, we're redecorating our house or we plan to be away all summer, etc." So how can we tell them they can't expect to be out houseguests?

NO LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO: Try total honesty. Simply say that you would be pleased to entertain them for an evening but you cannot accommodate them as house guests. Blunt? Yes. But unless you spell it out clearly, they might appear at your doorstep prepared to stay for a week.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year," — but they come anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really WANT, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: If you've actually written to say you can't accommodate them, but they come anyway — your only salvation is to develop a thicker hide. Greet the unwelcome ones at the door with, "You may stay for a few hours, but when the sun disappears, please do likewise."

FBI queries Africa cash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI has questioned conservative Senators S.I. Hayakawa (R-Calif.), and Roger Jepsen (R-Iowa) about allegations the South African government helped them unseat two liberal senators in 1976.

Both senators said Wednesday they told FBI investigators they have no knowledge of any South African money being "laundered" and illegally given to their campaign.

Sources said the investigations of the two campaigns are among four preliminary justice department inquiries into reports the South African government set up a slush fund to buy influence in Washington.

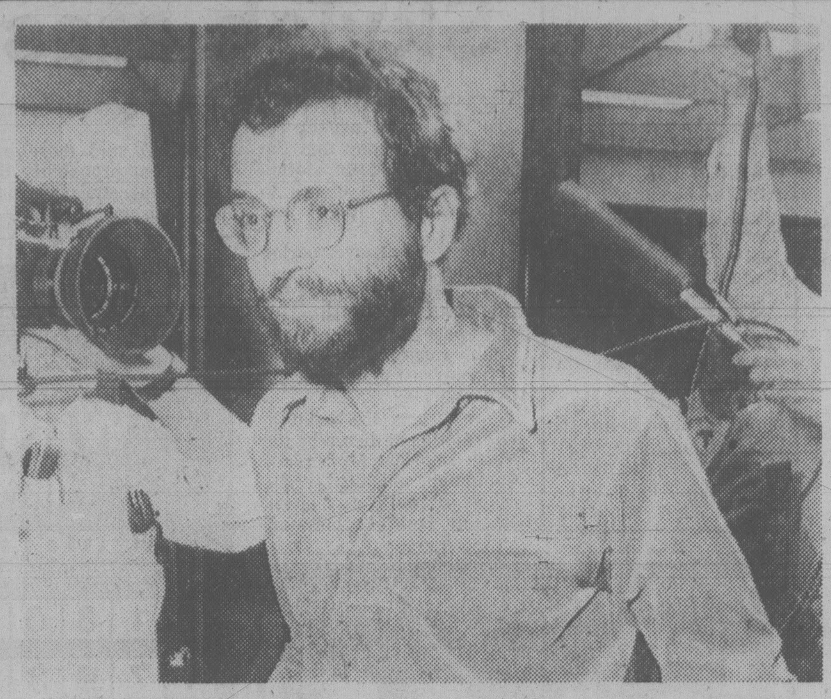
The investigations were also said to be focusing on:

—A report that some $20,000 was funneled to Jimmy Carter's presidential primary campaign in New York State. Sources said the inquiry has so far traced none of the Carter campaign money to South Africa.

—Reports that South African interests gave Gerald Ford $10,000 for delivering a speech in Houston after he left the presidency. There also have been reports South Africa gave Ford money during his unsuccessful 1976 campaign.

Hayakawa defeated liberal Democratic Sen. John Tunney in 1976. There have been reports in South African newspapers that the apartheid regime may have passed money either to Hayakawa or other California Democrats to help weaken Tunney's re-election effort.

He has said previously that if such contributions were made, they could have been laundered through small contributors without his knowledge.



Station owner Martin Heller leaves court after posting bail

Pump jockey's fee gets him arrested

BOSTON (AP) — He has been criticized, sued and now arrested — but Glenn Martin Heller keeps on pumping some of the most expensive gasoline in the United States.

The bearded and bespectacled gasoline dealer, whose 24-hour pumps doled out their commodity for as much as $1.56.9 a gallon, appeared in federal court this week to face price-gouging charges.

Heller pleaded not guilty before a U.S. magistrate to "unlawfully, knowingly and willfully" selling gasoline for more than the federal price limit — making 55 cents profit on every gallon, prosecutors said.

The 30-year-old Heller was released on $10,000 bail for a probable cause hearing June 29. If convicted he faces up to a year in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"The thing I can't believe is why people are buying the gas," said Margaret Sullivan, 29, of Beacon Hill. "We couldn't even fill up our bike tires there Sunday because they charge for air."

Heller's arrest — based on a complaint against his June 7 price of $1.42.9 for unleaded and $1.39.9 for regular — was not the first time his prices have put him in hot water.

The U.S. energy department has ordered him several times since December to roll back his prices and refund about $80,000 in overcharges to customers. Heller has appealed each order and faces $10,000 a day in fines if he loses.

Iran orders $1.2M down gutter

TEHRAN (AP) — Iranian revolutionary guards destroyed the rich wine cellar of the Intercontinental Hotel here, pouring down the drain an estimated $1.2 million worth of wines and spirits including a stream of the proudest French champagnes.

About a dozen guards, several with pistols around their waists, worked methodically through Tuesday night and all day Wednesday emptying the bottles. The drinking of alcohol is a violation of Islamic religious tradition.

Vintage champagnes were hauled up from the dark cellar — ordinary bottles, magnums and giant jeroboams — and carried carefully, one at a time to the hotel's rear staff entrance.

There they were opened one after the other, the pop of their corks sounding like muffled sobs, and their contents poured unceremoniously into the gutter, at the order of Tehran's Islamic revolutionary court.

Hundreds of bottles of fine wines from Europe and local wineries, whiskies, cognacs, rare liqueurs and 250,000 cans of imported beer all suffered the same fate.

"We had stock valued at $1.2 million in our cellar," a sad-faced senior hotel employee said.

When Iran's new regime came to power after the overthrow of Shah Mohmmad Reza Pahlavi's regime last February, revolutionary guards banned the consumption of alcohol, which Islamic tradition considers an inducement to evil.

"It's a terrible waste," complained the Intercontinental employee. "We could have re-exported all this drink, sold it and used the money for the benefit of the poor or to pay the hotel employees."

"Alcohol is bad for the body and nobody must drink it," said one of the pistol-packing guards as he opened beer cans and tossed them onto an ever-growing pile.

Local newspapers reported that more than $14-million worth of alcoholic beverages held as stocks by importers have been destroyed, by order of the Islamic courts.

All local wine and spirit manufacturing companies have been closed.

As You May Have Noticed

Auctioneers are no longer bringing container loads of furniture from Great Britain. Many of the local shops handling containers have discontinued doing so or have closed down. The reasons for this are varied. The main one's being:

1. Decline in the value of the $.
2. Escalating freight costs.
3. Increasing cost of goods in Great Britain combined with a growing scarcity.

We are therefore going out of the antiques and Olde English Furniture line and must liquidate our stock to convert over to new and used furniture and appliances. We will no longer be shipping containers but will occasionally accept consignment shipments. Most goods are priced at cost or below cost. Sanctions decision invites Carter veto

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Senate Wednesday gave approval to a defence authorization bill including a provision ordering an early end to economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

The bill now goes to a conference with the House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. (Dem-Mass.) predicted Wednesday the House would follow the Senate and approve an end to sanctions, thus raising the likelihood of a presidential veto.

Presidential Carter will "most probably" veto any bill ending the sanctions, a White House official said Wednesday night.

O'Neill said he would be surprised if the House did not vote to end the sanctions. But he said he doubted the margin would be large enough to override a veto. (That requires a two-thirds vote.)

The key Senate vote on the issue Tuesday night — 52 to 41 in support of a ban on sanctions — also suggested an insufficient majority in that body to override a veto.

The House could tack a sanctions-lifting provision onto the same defence authorization bill, vote it separately or add it to another bill. Whatever the vehicle, a House vote on the issue is likely in the near future.

The defence bill approved 89 to 7 in the Senate authorizes military purchases and research totaling $40.1 billion. Among the programs in the bill is $670 million for the new MX supermissile that Carter recently decided should be put into full-scale development.

Other items in the bill are a $1.7 billion aircraft carrier, a $1.1 billion missile-carrying Trident submarine, a $408 million nuclear attack sub, and money for continued production of a range of fighter aircraft and new ships.

In another development, the Nigerian ambassador to Washington, Olujimi Jolsoso, told a press conference here his government had made no decision to link "the question of oil with whether or not the United States decides to lift the sanctions and recognizes Rhodesia."

Earlier, the Nigerian Embassy here released a statement denouncing "the outcast puppet regime of Bishop Abel Muzorewa," and said any breach of UN sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia would be seen as a "deliberate challenge to the black race" and would "be met with an appropriate response."

Nazi doctor sentenced in absentia

BERLIN (AP) — A former Nazi doctor who was alleged to have injected gasoline into the veins of Jewish concentration camp prisoners and sent others to the gas chambers was fined 510,000 marks — the equivalent of $267,100 — in absentia Wednesday.

The accused, Dr. Aribert Ferdinand Heim, 64, has been sought by West German police since 1962, when he disappeared from his home.

Skylab crash data honed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. space agency reported Wednesday that the huge Skylab space station now is expected to fall to earth between July 7 and July 25.

That is a narrower period than the July 4-July 28 forecast made last Thursday in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's weekly report on the demise of the biggest man-made object in space.

NORAD said there is a 95-per-cent probability that Skylab will come down in the July 7-25 period, with a 50-per-cent probability the end will come by July 16.

NASA says most of the station, which served as an earth-orbiting home for three astronaut teams in 1973 and 1974, will burn up from atmospheric friction. But it expects about 500 pieces to survive and hit the earth.

Conspiracy conceded

LONDON (Reuter) — A defence lawyer in the Jeremy Thorpe murder conspiracy trial conceded Wednesday there was evidence of a conspiracy to frighten the man who claims he was Thorpe's homosexual lover.

But the lawyer, John Mathew, denied it was a conspiracy to murder the man — former male model Norman Scott — and said prosecution evidence had been given by "tainted witnesses."

Thorpe, former leader of the British Liberal party, and three other men deny plotting to kill Scott to stop him making damaging allegations about a homosexual affair.

Mathew, who represents one of the other accused, Thorpe's longtime friend David Holmes, was the first defence lawyer to give his closing speech.

He told the jury at London's Old Bailey criminal court: "I concede there is evidence of conspiracy at least to frighten, to which David Holmes was a party, but what we have to consider now is whether there is any reliable evidence of a conspiracy to kill."

In a blistering attack on key prosecution witnesses, Mathew said some of their evidence was beyond belief and could not possibly be relied on.

"My confident submission will be that the evidence is so unreliable that there is no way that you could confidently come to the conclusion that this case has been made out," he said.

He criticized the role of the news media in the case and the fact that two key witnesses had acknowledged they stood to make money out of the case, especially if Thorpe and the three other men are found guilty.

Mathew said the two witnesses who spoke against Holmes — former Liberal MP Peter Bessell and the alleged hitman Andrew Newton — were self-confessed liars or perjurers.

Holmes is alleged to have been a go-between in the bungled plot to murder Scott. Holmes, like Thorpe, has declined to give evidence in his own defence.

Obote plans return

KAMPALA (UPI) — Former Ugandan President Milton Obote, who was overthrown by Idi Amin eight years ago, plans to return from exile with the approval of the new government, the official Ugandan Times reported today.

The government newspaper quoted informed sources as saying Obote was told by President Yusufu Lule last weekend that he was welcome to return and "play his part in the reconstruction and rehabilitation of the country."

Obote took part in summit talks between Lule and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere at the Lake Victoria port city of Mwanza in northern Tanzania.

According to the newspaper, Obote, who has lived in exile in Dar-es-Salaam since being deposed, told Lule he planned to return and "participate in the task of nation building."

The newspaper report said Nyerere urged Obote to return as a means of countering speculation that he was plotting against Lule's government from exile.

Nonetheless, Lule is reported to be wary of Obote's intentions toward Uganda's embryo government and last week reshuffled his cabinet in what was seen as a move to strengthen anti-Obote forces in the government.

Obote has been reported to be interested in playing an active role in the government, but Lule has made it clear that he would have to return as a private citizen.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2♡	Pass	3♡	Pass
4♡

Opening lead – four of spades.

Let's assume you're West, defending against four hearts. Choosing the right opening lead is far from clear, but let's say you decide that the best chance of stopping the contract lies in leading your singleton — even though South bid the suit.

This proves to be a lucky shot; you find partner with four to the A-K. He wins the spade with the king and recognizes your four as a singleton. But if, in his exuberance, your partner continues with the ace and another spade, he undoes all the good done by your opening lead.

You would ruff the third round of spades, but that would be the end of the party. Declarer wins whatever you return, draws trumps, discards two diamonds from dummy on his Q-10 of spades and so makes the contract.

But if East is firing on all cylinders, he returns the spade nine, not the ace, at trick two. He thus retains spade control at the same time as he gives you ruff. This allows you to lead a low diamond at trick three to force out the ace — and thus establishes the setting trick.

East's return of the nine of spades, rather than the deuce, is consistent with the suit preference convention. By returning the highest card he can spare in a ruffing situation, East asks you to return the higher-ranking of the two side suits — which, in this case, are diamonds and clubs.

It takes excellent defense to put South down one. West must find the killing spade lead at trick one, East must give partner the spade ruff at trick two, and West must lead a diamond at trick three. If East-West overcome these three hurdles, they have every right to congratulate themselves on a scintillating partnership accomplishment.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

BY SYDNEY OMARR
for Friday, June 15

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): You're on the verge of breakthrough — you'll be happier and have reason to celebrate. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Make inquiries; give full play to intellectual curiosity. You will obtain answers.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): You gain through intervention of friend. Know it and plan accordingly. Be specific, direct, get to heart of matters. Aquarius, Leo persons figure prominently. What seemed to be a trap becomes blessing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Ask questions — pierce curtain that would obscure truth. Push through to make your place. One who is a "secret admirer" does something very nice for you. Prestige is on upswing as you receive special commendation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Diplomacy, a sense of what is to be — these dominate. Your perceptiveness surges to forefront — you "see" outline of future. Family concern evaporates — solution to dilemma is simple. You find out how to do it!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Look behind the scenes — see places, people as they are, not merly as you fantasize them. Avoid self-deception. dig deep for financial facts of live. One close to you confides problem. You'll gain rare insights!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go slow, maintain focus on ultimate objective, get hint from Leo message. Love, responsibility and money tend to co-mingle. Emphasis on contracts, public relations, cooperative efforts and marital status. Be discreet concerning a "secret."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than start — you gain by smoothing rough edges. Take nothing for granted in connection with basic services, dependents. Another Libra — and an Aries — figure in scenario. Surge of activity follows "passive period."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Highlight originality, independence — be open to fresh concepts, new contacts. Imprint your own style, start something new. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Emotional responses, affairs of heart dominate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 22): Take conservative course. Means remain on familair ground. Establish position — deal with family member who has been "whining" for attention. Message will become crystal clear. Aquarian plays key role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel, written reports, articles, visits and visitors fill busy scenario. You emerge from period of brooding. Pressures lift: you have more room, more of a chance for self-expression. You could ride a lucky streak!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You show a profit if thorough. Study subtle nuances, check details, read between the lines. Accent on money, personal possessions, lost-and-found articles. Another Aquarian can "light the path."

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Take lead, get started on project. Contact made could develop into significant relationship. Cycle high — trust your own instincts, judgement. Refuse to be intimidated by one who sings the blues and is envious.

IF JUNE 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have charm, talent and a compelling voice. You ask "uncomfortable" questions and you usually get answers. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1979, a year which sees you establishing "territorial rights." You get on more solid ground. If single, you marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. You face major decision, involving direction — which way to go. Older family member lends benefit of experience. You gain if pride does not block good sense. How far you go is up to you. In August, the way is clear — you need only to take first step in direct, courageous manner.

Basque bombers damage offices

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — A wave of bomb blasts early today caused heavy damage but no casualties at a number of government offices and a sports stadium in this capital of the Basque region of northern Spain, police said.

Police sources said they believe the bombs were set off by guerrillas of the Basque separatist organization ETA.

The bombings damaged offices of the culture and finance ministries, the provincial palace of justice, the office of the navy commander and a sports stadium.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The small brown monkeys with big ears and large eyes can't even imagine the fuss they are causing.

They sit quietly at the centre of international wrangling over lofty questions of justifiable research versus animal rights. Meanwhile, their availability for research decreases, and some persons fear a serious shortage of the valuable research animal.

Some say it is cruel to experiment with animals, others that it is necessary to help man conquer diseases and afflictions. In between is the rhesus monkey, a bare-faced creature standing two-thirds of a metre tall as an adult.

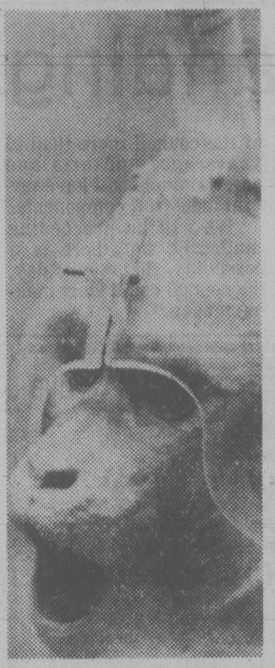
This heavy-browed animal with close-set eyes is revered in India as the reincarnation of Hanuman, the Hindu monkey god.

While not considered a god by U.S. scientists, the rhesus has become invaluable because of its biological similarity to man. It is considered practically irreplaceable in some work.

"There is a shortage of rhesus monkeys and we are in trouble," says Dr. Robert Whitney, director of the Animal Resources Program at the National Institutes of Health.

Whitney says scientists are not yet complaining too much about the shortage because bans on the export of monkeys from producing countries are relatively new.

"But there is going to be a real crunch five or six years from now if they don't get monkeys elsewhere," he said.



RHESUS WRANGLE has been caused by primates such as this one which is being fed doses of amphetamines through a specially-designed plastic helmet as it sits in its laboratory cage.

Move bill bound

WASHINGTON (WP) — Responding to complaints that moving companies deliberately give customers low estimates to get their business, the U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission Wednesday proposed making movers' estimates binding.

The proposal would make the moving company's estimate the maximum amount that could be charged. If the weight of the load turned out to be less than estimated, the customer would pay less.

The rule was proposed after ICC investigations showed that about one in four moving bills is more than 10 per cent higher than estimated.

Under present ICC rules, movers' estimates are not binding. The ICC said this often leads to "lowballing" — movers deliberately giving a low estimate to get the customer's business, then charging a higher price.

The ICC also is attacking another frequently criticized moving industry practice called "weight bumping."

The Banff Centre School of Fine Arts announces its new
Advanced Conservatory Program in Music
This unique program will begin this fall by providing advanced training and practical performing experience to a select group of advanced string players and pianists who have already completed formal training. It is based on the preparation and performance of chamber music under the guidance of a resident faculty and visiting artists, including pianists Arpad Joo, Walter Klien, Anton Kuerti, Isobel Moore, Patricia Parr, Menahem Pressler, Gyorgy Sebok, Elyakim Taussig and Robin Wood; violinists Lorand Fenyves, Igor Oistrakh, Thomas Rolston, Josef Suk and Zoltan Szekely; cellist Janos Starker; bassist Stuart Knussen; the Borodin String Quartet, the Fine Arts Quartet, the Hertz Trio, and the trio One-Third Ninth. There will also be a special program for a small group of young composers.
Applications are invited from individual pianists and string players, pre-formed ensembles, and composers. The sole criteria for acceptance will be a high level of present achievement, the potential for further development and a well-defined goal for a professional career.
For full details on the program, including scholarship assistance, interviews and auditions, write to:

Canada Council expanding

OTTAWA (CP) — The grant-giving Canada Council, with a promise of more funds from the new government, will consider ways to join private investors in financing showbusiness ventures, Chairman Mavor Moore said Wednesday.

He said the council has asked its staff for a report on joint-venture financing ideas for its September meeting.

Conceivably, he said, the council might make money on a deal with private industry or another government agency such as the CBC or the National Film Board.

Moore said at a press conference after a council meeting that the council met David Macdonald, the new secretary of state in the Clark government and Pierre Juneau, the deputy minister who is continuing in that office, and all agreed the time has come for a fresh look at federal government financing for the arts.

It will not be a royal commission enquiry like that headed by Vincent Massey 30 years ago, but it will be undertaken by some kind of parliamentary investigation yet to be devised.

Moore said the growth of demand for federal funds in all forms of the arts has been phenomenal since creation of the council more than 25 years ago, and arts and entertainment now have several industrial components.

"We will be proceeding cautiously, but there is a possibility that some day, the council could start making money."

He's the cleanest actor in town

Scott's World

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The cleanest actor in town has to be Robert Mandan, a veteran of daytime soap operas who also stars as Chester Tate in the wacky prime time comedy series Soap.

Awash in suds for much of his career, Mandan spent four years in Search for Tomorrow and three years in From These Roots during the day while working on and off Broadway in New York.

Women viewers, he observed, have a greater tolerance for rape, incest, marital infidelity, illegitimate birth and other social aberrations than do men who react with shock to life's tribulations as seen in soaps.

He believes Soap's success with male viewers is attributable to the fact that the series treats social shockers with zany humor.

At season's end his wife, Jessica, has taken up with a detective (John Byner) she hires to find her missing husband. The question is, when the series resumes in the fall, will Jessica opt for the shamus or return to the marital bed with good old Chester.

Chester has a roving eye and Jessica has a roving mind. Between the two, madness carries the day in the irreverent series.

Mandan is a big, strong-featured man with 20 years experience in the theater and movies. But he was just another face in the crowd before he accepted the role of Tate two years ago.

He finds playing Tate a blessed relief from his typecasting as a movie-TV villain. In the theater he played only leading men.

"We have a basic cast of 14 characters and some of us rarely are seen on camera together. There isn't a single character who hasn't had at least one pre-marital or extra-marital affair except Bob, the dummy.

"Like Three's Company, we're a sex farce but the sexual involvements are incidental to the craziness that goes on. We magnify the wild possibilities of unfaithful husbands and wives without getting too specific about sex itself.

"Next season we're losing Robert Guillaume, the butler, who has spun off into his own series. God knows who they'll find to replace him. He was the only totally sane character in the series.

Bickering ends in oil crisis face

Times News Services

The United States and its leading allies today agreed to put up a united front against threatened steep new oil price hikes expected later this month.

According to diplomatic sources in Paris the world's major industrialized countries have resolved to keep bickering among themselves to a minimum and seek a joint response to the oil price hikes.

The co-operation pledge was the highlight of the two-day ministerial session of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, which winds up today.

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher led the drive for greater cooperation instead of unilateral action Wednesday when he told the 14-nation conference "concerted action is necessary in both the short and longer run in order to close the gap between oil demand and supply and relieve the upward pressure on prices."

In addition, Christopher warned the nations from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that they must not damage the world economy through excessive price rises.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the U.S. Council of Economic Advisers, warned that if the OECD nations fail to meet their pledge to reduce oil consumption by 5 per cent, "both higher inflation and unemployment and lower growth are almost inevitable."

The Western search for a joint approach to the looming new energy crisis came 24 hours after Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah disclosed the coming OPEC meeting in Geneva June 26 may deliver "a shock" to the West to force it to adopt much more drastic oil conservation measures.

Echoing the U.S. call for a joint strategy, French Economics Minister Rene Monory said all nations must announce a "precise commitment to moderate oil imports, build up nuclear and other energy resources."

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Kremlin decreed today that "very strict" energy-saving measures be adopted throughout the Soviet Union to help boost supplies of fuel and electric power.

The decree criticized shortcomings in transportation of fuel to consumers and ordered increases in output of coal, heavy oil and natural gas.

Ordered were production increases by the end of this year of one million metric tons of coal from the Ekibastuz area of Soviet Kazakhstan, 3.2 million tons of heavy oil and one billion cubic metres of natural gas.

Jamaica flooding kills 32

KINGSTON (AP) — Floods fed by heavy rains from the first Caribbean storm of the Atlantic hurricane season have killed at least 32 persons in Jamaica in two days and more are missing and feared dead.

Damage is estimated at more than $15 million and hundreds are left homeless.

Authorities said 25 persons died in Westmoreland, 208 kilometres west of Kingston; five were killed in Montego Bay, at the northwestern end of the island, and two in Clarendon, 48 kilometres east of Kingston.

Wedged torpedo freed from N-submarine's hull

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — U.S. Navy workmen today freed a powerful torpedo which had been wedged for two days against the hull of a nuclear attack submarine at the Norfolk Naval Station.

The workers set the Mark 48 torpedo on the pier shortly after 11 a.m. after resuming their efforts to free it at 7 a.m.

Other than a couple of dents, there was no damage to the submarine Memphis, navy spokesmen said. They said the torpedo will be sent to an ordinance facility to be checked for damage.

The torpedo had been wedged inside the Memphis in the sub's loading area. It became jammed against the structure Tuesday after accidentally sliding down a tray that guides it into the firing tube, navy spokesmen said.

Spokesmen had acknowledged the situation was dangerous. They said the major risk was not an explosion but the possibility the torpedo could have shifted and injured workmen.

The torpedo carried a conventional warhead but no detonator. The explosive power of the Mark 48 is classified, but the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot had quoted sources as saying such a weapon could sink the Memphis if it had blown up inside the hull.

The newspaper's sources added that chances of such an accidental explosion were remote but that even if it did occur, there would be no atomic blast from the submarine's reactor, although some radiation likely would spread.

One crew member on an adjacent submarine said he and his shipmates were nervous.

The Memphis belongs to the latest class of nuclear-powered attack submarines in the U.S. Navy — the 688 class. The Mark 48 is said to be the most elaborate and advanced weapon of its kind ever devised, vastly more potent than the torpedoes of the Second World War.

Muzorewa rules out guarantee of peace

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa of Zimbabwe Rhodesia is quoted in today's Globe and Mail as saying his new government cannot guarantee that its forces will not attack Zambia during the Commonwealth conference in August.

The newspaper carries on its front page an exclusive interview with Muzorewa in Salisbury with correspondent Allen Pizzey in which the prime minister is quoted as saying:

"If there should be an incident which would necessitate my forces to defend themselves before it is too late then I'm afraid I can't rule that out that if it took place during the Commonwealth conference there could be trouble.

"So let's be honest with that one and say that no one can gurantee the conference can go peacefully without some disruption if the unfortunate situation should arise."

Earlier in London the Commonwealth secretariat denied that the meeting might be switched from Zambia, which adjoins Zimbabwe Rhodesia, for security reasons.

Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand had voiced concern that the Queen might be in danger in that her aircraft could be shot down by Rhodesian guerrillas while flying to Lusaka, the Zambian capital, for the conference which is to open Aug. 1.

Bright idea

NEW YORK (AP) — General Electric said today it will market a new kind of light bulb that is three times as efficient and four times as long-lasting as the common incandescent bulb. But the bulbs will cost more than ordinary bulbs too — probably $10 each when they first become available in 1981, GE executives said.

Politicians 'total morons' when it comes to science

Politicians are "total morons when it comes to applying science," zoologist Dr. David Suzuki said Wednesday.

Speaking at the annual congress of the Canadian Physiotherapy Association in the Empress Hotel, Suzuki said 90 per cent of all politicians were either businessmen or lawyers.

Suzuki, a part-time faculty member of the University of B.C. who is well-known for his scientific television programs, said politicians are incapable of dealing with such questions as uranium mining in B.C. and communication satellites.

He said more than 50 per cent of scientific breakthroughs have been used by the military and most of the rest has been used by private industry.

"It's been either for power or profit," he said.

He said next to scientists or people with scientific backgrounds, such as physicians, farmers have the greatest conception of what science is able to accomplish.

Suzuki said the public has been disenfranchised when it comes to science.

"The public is afraid of science. It feels it doesn't have the knowledge and intelligence. This is a myth generated through the education syatem."

He said the 20th century will be known as "the golden age of genetics" because of the breakthroughs in knowledge of how man functions. He said the sole legacy parents give a child is a sperm and an egg yet it is known that each body has 60 trillium cells, each cell with the knowledge capacity of 1,000 volumes of Shakespeare.

During our lifetimes, Suzuki said, we can expect to have computers that can think, regeneration of limbs and organs, cloning and colonies in outer space.

He said the rapid advances in science make parents foreigners to their children.

"One of the problems is they (children) accept and understand change as part of their culture and we are foreigners living in their world."

He said it is essential the public become enlightened and have a say in how science will be used.

"The public has not had any say in how science is used."

Killer whales respond to drugs like humans

Killer whales respond to drugs — with the exception of penicillin — much as humans do, Dr. Ken Thornton told the annual congress of the Canadian Physiotherapy Association.

Director of laboratories and chief pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital, Thornton was one of the medical team that helped save the life of the young killer whale Miracle after she was found dying in Menzies Bay.

Thornton said because so little is known about killer whales he gambled that Miracle could be treated similar to a human. It worked and results have shown that killer whales are very close to human beings in their metabolic function.

He said the type of hemoglobin, the chemical which transports oxygen in red blood cells, in adult killer whales is identical to that in human infants. He said killer whales probably do not have the adult hemoglobin because different demands are made on their system.

Thornton said his study of whales' metabolism suggests that their capacity to store oxygen is the same as humans. This would mean that whales would not be able to hold their breath for more than two or three minutes under water. Yet whales, defying science, have been seen spending up to 20 minutes underwater.

Tests have indicated that the whales probably switch to a non-oxygen (anaerobic) metabolism while under water. It is known that human infants function anaerobically for the first few minutes of their life.

Hold your tongue GENTLY, Johnny

A University of Chile den-tal school physiotherapist has a warning for parents who tell their noisy children to hold their tongue.

Mariano Rocabado says holding the tongue the wrong way can affect the teeth, spine chest, abdomen, pelvis and legs.

The tongue provides internal pressure against the palate, balancing pressures from the developing facial muscles on the outside, Rocabado told the annual conference of the Canadian Physiotherapy Association.

If that pressure is missing, he said, the palate will develop abnormally, restricting the size of the nasal passage and causing the teeth to grow improperly.

When the tongue is against the palate, breathing through the mouth usually is impossible, but mouth-breathers, who represent about 60 per cent of the population between the ages of five and 12, sometimes use the muscles of the head and neck to breathe.

Rocabado said that leads to an abnormal position of the head and poor development of the chest muscles which in turn affects the spine and in extreme cases can transfer abnormal development to the legs through poor pelvic alignment.

The physiotherapist's job is to guide growth by managing soft tissue, such as the tongue, Rocabado said.

Third Highlands plan

A third proposal for zoning undeveloped land in the Highlands district was recommended Wednesday by the Capital Regional Board zoning committee — retaining a 45-acre minimum for most of the area.

Two areas of about 500 acres are excluded from the proposal, one at Fork Lake, the other at East Munns Road, to provide for subdivisions of five acres average minimum size. These are within Langford or Willis Point fire protection.

Owners would not be permitted to erect houses on lands sloping more than 30 degrees, in bogs, marshes or flood plains.

Two earlier proposals the region considered involved a 10-acre minimum and a combination of 45-acre and 10-acre requirements in areas expected to develop.

Many opponents rejected any kind of development in favor of future recreational land, but some property owners were opposed because they would not be able to take advantage of subdivision prospects.

Outer Gulf Islands director Jim Campbell said a freeze on sub-dividing can put some owners in a dilemma, and cited his own experience with some rural property bought 35 years ago.

"I lived on it, paid taxes on it and raised my family on it."

But he does not want to sell or develop it, he said.

"Now bodies such as the Islands Trust and the Nature Conservancy of Canada think they would like it to be made into a park, but they don't want to pay for it."

City fire officials believe they have found the source of a strong gasoline odor that has been worrying residents of the highrise Tara Place Apartments at 1039 View for the past week.

Deputy chief Mike Heppell said today workmen dug up two gas storage tanks in a vacant service station next door to the apartment on Wednesday and discovered one of the tanks may have been leaking.

How to handle an iris

GARDENING
Jack Beastall

Although there are enough types of irises to have one flowering each month of the year with the possible exception of August, the so-called German, or Bearded, iris is the one most often seen in home gardens.

This is Iris germanica belonging to the rhizomatous group, a rhizome being a large food storage stem from which roots extend downwards and leaves appear above soil.

The rhizome of Iris germanica lies half-in and half-out of the soil like a duck floating on water. In this position it is sunbaked in summer, but when buried it fails to produce good flowers.

A single rhizome with a strong growth bud on one end is all that is needed for a start. After producing a fan of leaves and a flower stem, two growth buds appear in the following year. Each growth bud produces leaves and flower stems and eventually develops into extension rhizomes.

In five to seven years there will be a mass of rhizomes with leaves and flowers only on new growth tips at the outer edges. When this stage is reached it is time to lift the clump, remove the rhizomes with growth buds and discard the rest.

This spreading of the rhizomes over a larger area each year is a means of reaching into new soil for food. The plants are heavy feeders that deplete the soil in the root area with each year's growth and have to find new pastures to continue their existence.

In a small garden where a striking display of color is needed for a feature in June, renovation of the iris bed is essential about every fifth year. This is done as soon as the last flowers fade. It is wise to tag each plant with its varietal name or color while still in flower.

Rarely is the remaking of an iris bed a job that can be done in an hour or two, for it involves lifting, making the new bed, washing and trimming, and the selection of rhizomes for replanting.

The first step is the removing of the clumps of rhizomes from the bed. Some of the loose soil can be worked off by hand, the rest being left for the present. The clumps, with labels attached, are stacked in the shade of shrubs or at the base of a tree, and covered with damp sacking.

The new bed is then prepared. First it is levelled, spread with six to eight inches of good compost, then dug and thoroughly mixed. Never use any manure in an iris bed as it causes a rot to develop.

The remaining soil on the clumps of rhizomes is then washed off with a hose. This should be done where other plants will benefit from the water. When the clumps are clean it is easy to spot the rhizomes which have no growth buds. These are cut off and discarded.

The best rhizomes with leaf fans are selected for replanting. For ease of handling, the fans of leaves are trimmed with a sharp knife, starting low on each side and slashing to a high point at the centre of the fan. The high centre is necessary to avoid cutting new leaves already present in the fan. The trimmed leaves will wither.

At all stages of the work the rhizomes are kept under the cover of damp sacking, not plastic.

Finally, the trimmed rhizomes are replanted, usually five to seven in a group spaced about eight inches apart. Since the rhizome must sit on solid soil, two holes are dug with a trowel, one sloping to the left and one to the right, leaving firm soil in the centre. The rhizome goes on this firm soil with the roots down the two sloping holes. The soil is filled in a pressed firm against the roots.

Since the rhizomes must bake in summer sunshine, the fan of trimmed leaves is placed to the north and the rhizome to the south.

When planting is completed the top soil is levelled to just cover the rhizomes. Watering follows, and the soil should be halfway up the sides of the rhizomes when finished. If not, more soil is filled into the hollows.

Dance centre to stage review

Winner in many categories in the recent Victoria Music Festival dance competitions, Pacific Dance Centre will present its Review '79 at McPherson Playhouse, Sunday at 2 p.m.

Principal of the Centre, Maureen Eastick, has programmed a number of her original pieces, including some of those featured in the festival dance honors performance and Highlights concert.

One of these is the ballet, Madeleine, adapted from the children's story of the little French schoolgirl who couldn't avoid mischief. This has been developed into a trilogy, with Madeleine seen at the ages of six, 10 and 14.

The senior ballet group will be performing their lovely award-winning traditional ballet, and Kim Tuson, the tied winner of ballet, 14 and under, will be a featured soloist. Kim also won the most versatile dancer award and shared the Wynne Shaw Award.

Eastick's interpretive ballet, Jonathan Seagull, and the Noah's Ark ballet, Two by Two — "with hoards of bunnies" — are on the program. "We're trying for contrast, to be as entertaining as possible," she says. "That's why I've included Life in the Country, which is all froth and fun."

Also on behalf of variety, there will be a few tap and jazz numbers. Velda Scobie and Sherry Black teach these dance categories for Pacific Dance Centre.

Wearing of helmets urged

Attorney-General Garde Gardom is urging motorcyclists to wear safety helmets although police will not have the power to charge offenders for the next few days.

Some motorcyclists abandoned the protective headgear after Provincial Court Judge Selwyn Romilly ruled last Friday in Burnaby that the old helmet regulation was invalid.

Bob Whitlock, superintendent of motor vehicles, said a new regulation was drafted Monday and approved the following day.

Gardom said the regulation first must be filed with the regulation clerk and published in the B.C. Gazette before legal action against offenders can be initiated.

He said the regulation likely will be published in the Gazette on Friday or Monday.

Sales tax bill passes second reading

The legislature Wednesday unanimously approved second reading of a bill allowing the already implemented reduction in sales tax but not before the NDP scorched it as an election gimmick.

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich (Nanaimo) suggested the bill should be entitled "A Tax to Effect the Re-Election of the Social Credit Government" rather than the Social Services Tax Amendment Act, 1979.

It deserves that title because it worked, Stupich said.

The NDP said over the long haul the Socred record on sales tax still averages more than the five per cent rate that was in effect when Social Credit was first elected.

The Socreds jumped the rate to seven per cent in 1976 and then dropped it back to five per cent in 1978 before lowering it to four per cent this spring.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said Finance Minister Evan Wolfe was offering a paradox in his reasons for lowering the rate.

He said Wolfe told the house in 1976 that increasing the tax to seven per cent would not depress the economy but now he says lowering the rate will stimulate the economy.

Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said the bill should go further and end sales tax on building supplies.

Wolfe estimates the loss in revenue from the reduction will reach $133 million for the 1979-80 fiscal year.

Members also whipped through a number of other finance bills, giving second reading unanimously to income tax reduction, corporation capital tax reduction and pari-mutuel betting reduction.

No penalty for deputy

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has no intention of reprimanding his senior adviser for stating publicly that the compulsory heroin treatment program will not work, a Gardom aide said today.

John Eckstedt also told a Saskatchewan group that the program might violate a person's civil rights.

Gardom has refused comment on the statements because, according to an aide, the constitutionality of the heroin treatment program in the courts.

Masselink elected

Joyce Masselink was elected president of the Victoria branch of the B.C. Association of Social Workers at the branch's annual meeting Wednesday night.

She replaces June Preston who becomes past president.

Mac-Blo buys Parksville timberland

MacMillan Bloedel has announced it has purchased nearly 3,400 acres of timberland near Parksville for more than $2 million.

The purchase was made to help offset reductions from the company's managed forest resource caused by from single-use recreation areas, rights-of-way and urban expansion.

President Calvert Knudsen said the company is exploring every avenue to maintain the wood supply required for its manufacturing plants.

EATON'S

THE MOST CRITICAL FIVE MINUTES IN BUICK HISTORY...
ARE YOUR FIRST FIVE MINUTES TEST DRIVING A 1980 FRONT-WHEEL-DRIVE SKYLARK.

Buick is now out to change your mind about driving in the future. And a 1980 Skylark should do it, beginning with the first few minutes of your test drive.

You see, between what you're used to, and an all-new Buick Skylark – the critical difference is in the driving!

You don't have to leave the showroom to see that Skylark's new styling is crisp and clean. Or that Skylark feels soft and luxurious and roomy to sit in.

The real test is the test drive! How else can you tell that Skylark has a smooth, effortless ride similar to a big car, with the quick, precise response of a smaller car? Or that you get 4-cylinder 0-100 KPH acceleration as peppy as last year's comparably-equipped V6 model, and V6 response as good as last year's 5.0 litre V8 because of the better power-to-weight ratio? And, until you get out on the road, how can you really experience Skylark's serene, quiet ride?

BREAKING NEW GROUND IS NOTHING NEW TO BUICK.

A new Skylark has MacPherson strut front suspension, which helps give it the feel of a big-car ride, yet hugs it to the road through the corners... and, like the current Riviera, Motor Trend magazine's Car of the Year, Skylark has front-wheel drive, for impressive handling, stability and traction.

WHEN THE WEATHER IS TERRIBLE, FRONT WHEEL DRIVE IS TERRIFIC.

Skylark has the positive control that comes with rack-and-pinion steering. And Skylark's engine is mounted transversely (facing sideways), which helps explain all that room for up to five people.

What's new? Everything. And to drive it, is to know it.

There are six new models. A Skylark Coupe and a Sedan (uncommonly, there's about the same room in the rear of a two-door as in a four-door, so one size fits all); then, there's a Sport Coupe and a Sport Sedan; and our ultra-Skylarks, the Limited 2-door Coupe and Limited 4-door Sedan. As for available options, the new Skylark offers a wider choice than ever before. Just ask your Buick dealer.

NEW TIMES. NEW BUICKS.

The 1980 Skylark is a new brand of Buick that is quite spectacular for its combination of very good ideas in so many areas. Buick has a lot riding on how well Skylark's new engineering and design features are received – but, frankly, we're confident that the 1980's will belong to cars like Buick's new Skylark.

Don't hold back. Take that critical test drive now. Buying or leasing, a 1980 Buick Skylark could be the perfect new car for you.

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Members of the Bounty Hunter motorycle club in Victoria are going to fight the compulsory helmet law that will be coming into effect within the next few days.

The Harley-Davidson “hog” straddlers decided at a meeting Wednesday night to start a letter-writing campaign to their MLAs to get help in changing the law.

Spokesman Pete Gosvig, 28, said the group wants to use legitimate means to try to pressure the government into giving experienced riders the choice of wearing a helmet.

“We want to try to get public opinion behind us,” he said.

However, if those efforts fail, there are rumblings of tougher action.

There is talk of a possible protest ride to the Legislative Buildings involving as many as 200 bikers from the Island and Lower Mainland.

And Gosvig said some thought is being given to defying the law by not wearing helmets.

“We could clutter up the court with charges, just to show how ridiculous the law is,” he said.

For the past three weeks, the group has been circulating a petition which they intend to present to Premier Bill Bennett.

The petition asks the government to amend the helmet regulation so that only riders under the age of 19 or with less than two years motorcycle riding experience will have to wear an approved safety helmet.

Club members say they have close to 2,000 signatures and claim support has come from some unexpected quarters including a retired policeman, as well as lawyers, doctors and paramedics.

A regulation requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets was quashed last week by Burnaby provincial court Judge Selywn Romilly who ruled the law was invalid because the province failed to set its own standards for approved helmets.

Since then a new regulation has been drafted and

Desperate Managua looters hunt food

Times News Services

MANAGUA — Thousands of desperate Nicaraguans have begun looting long-closed stores here, dodging bullets while trying to balance huge loads of stolen goods.

As word of break-ins spread, slum residents ran toward stores and shopping centres in middle-class areas, scrambling barefoot over piles of broken window glass to fill boxes and bags.

Commerce has totally shut down in the city, as a three-week-old strike has given way to widespread street battles.

Even those with money can no longer buy food.

With the battle for Managua still intense, the U.S. Air Force flew out two more planeloads of U.S. citizens Wednesday — about 150 persons mostly women and children — to the Panama Canal Zone for transfer to commercial flights home.

Heavy fighting was again reported in the northern part of the country, where Sandinista guerrillas control several cities and a number of small villages while the National Guard concentrates its main effort in Managua.

President Anastasio Somoza, meanwhile, told a U.S. television interviewer the fighting and looting were “only in certain parts of the city, but the country in general terms is at peace.”

Somoza said his troops now control the west, north and south of the city and are mopping up guerrilla strongholds in the east alongside the airport road.

As battles in widespread areas of the city continued, the National Guard regained some territory and lost some won the day before. Tuesday, about half of the five-mile highway to the international airport was clear of rebel barricades.

Wednesday, while the airport itself apparently remains untouched — and a flight from Miami landed — the tenacious guerrillas reconstructed barriers.

Despite the fact that many people in the slums talk about rebel-controlled areas as “liberated zones” or “peoples’ areas,” the Sandinistas can be ruthless with some local residents.

Wednesday morning, a sobbing man ran into the Intercontinental Hotel with five small, dirty children. He said he was a teacher from a nearby barrio who the guerrillas had branded an “oreja,” — the Spanish word for ear that, in local vernacular, means government spy.

The man said the rebels had posted his picture on street corners, burned down his office and issued orders for his death.

Plea on beer from Mitchell

If smokers have a friend in Don Lockstead, then beer drinkers have a buddy in Frank Mitchell.

Lockstead, the chain-smoking NDP MLA from Mackenzie was the sole member who opposed an increased tax on tobacco last year.

And Mitchell, the newly elected NDP MLA for Esquimalt-Port Renfrew made a plea on behalf of beer drinkers in the legislature Wednesday.

Mitchell objects to the fact that the three-year-old sales tax rate of seven per cent still applies to alcohol. Everything else is assessed at four per cent.

“Beer is the working man’s beverage,” he told the house, adding if the legislature can’t see its way clear to cut the tax on all liquor products, it should at least consider beer.

Mitchell said that as a policeman, he is aware of the dangers of abuse of alcohol, but he said it is also time to stop considering alcohol an evil.

That view was expressed by old Labor MLA Tom Uphill (Fernie), his seat-mate, when he was first elected to the house in 1951, Mitchell said.

Troops help trucks along

Times News Services

Troops and highway patrolmen protected truck convoys moving in violence-torn Alabama today despite the independent truckers’ protest.

But the independents shut down fuel depots in three southern states, drying up gas supplies and forcing officials to seek court orders to end the blockades.

The week-old slowdown disrupted commerce in at least 29 of the 50 states.

Scores of truckers were arrested on various charges as convoys snarled traffic in at least six states. Numerous truck stops were blockaded from New England to Oregon. Some Canadian truckers entering U.S. trouble spots were also blockaded and their tires shot out.

The demonstrations escalated this week after the Independent Truckers Association urged all 100,000 U.S. owner-operators to join in a protest to demand guaranteed fuel allocations, standardized weight and load regulations and an increase in the speed limit to 104 km/h.

And state leaders attending the western governors’ conference in Sun Valley, Idaho — facing the possible loss of valuable farm produce as a result of the truckers’ shutdown — urged the Interstate Commerce Commission on Wednesday to allow rate increases for merchandise hauled by the independents.

“We want to get this over with as quick as possible,” said Bill Scheffer of Breezewood, Pa., national vice-president o the Independent Truckers Association. “It’s either a slow death or a fast one and we’d just as soon get it over with.”

The truckers received added support Wednesday from the National Association of Truck Stop Operators, representing 1,100 truckstops, many of which have been blockaded or closed voluntarily.

William Maebert, incoming chairman of the association and owner of a truck stop in St. Augustine, Fla., called on Transportation Secretary Brock Adams to become “actively and vocally involved” in seeking solutions to the diesel fuel problems.

The protesting truckers want guaranteed diesel fuel allocations and a decrease in prices they say have reached as high as $1.29 a gallon in some areas. The U.S. gallon is about four-fifths of a Canadian.

Indefinite probation for shots in arena

TERRACE (CP) — A 15-year-old Terrace boy was placed on indefinite probation Tuesday for firing four rifle shots at Prince Rupert hockey players following a brawl Jan. 6.

The juvenile, who pleaded guilty to possession of a firearm dangerous to the public, was ordered to perform 200 hours of community work and to stay off arena property.

Judge Darrell Collins also prohibited the juvenile from possessing a firearm, ammunition or explosives for two years.

No one was injured in the shooting which happened outside the arena. The juvenile fired at a van filled with the 16- to 18-year-old Prince Rupert players.

Earlier, during the game which was won by Prince Rupert, several off-duty RCMP officers were needed to break up a brawl which broke out between the Prince Rupert team and some of the Terrace fans. There were no injuries in the brawl.

$7.5 billion drain for U.K. investors

LONDON (CP) — British investors lost a total of more than £3 billion ($7.5 billion) in two days as share prices continued to slide today in the wake of the new Conservative government’s controversial budget.

The budget reduced personal income taxes but pushed up sales taxes and interest rates and the government acknowledged that inflation, currently about 10 per cent, may shoot up to an annual rate of 17 per cent later this year.

Unions, worried about higher costs, have warned they will seek sharply higher wages in their next round of demands. Scottish miners said they will seek a minimum wag of £140 ($350) a week, a boost of about 60 per cent over their current rate.

No hospital budget cut insists McClelland

Health Minister Bob McClelland reiterated Wednesday that there have been no cuts in hospital budgets and none are intended.

McClelland made the claim Wednesday after NDP MLAs delivered scathing criticism of current hospital funding.

Urged by Gordon Hanson (NDP—Victoria) to drop the five-per-cent ceiling imposed by the government on hospital budget increases, McClelland said “there is no five-per-cent ceiling and there never has been.”

McClelland said hospitals now are getting more money than ever before.

However, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe made reference last January to a five-per-cent ceiling on hospital budgets while announcing a government program for the control of local property taxes.

Hospital workers at Victoria’s Glengarry hospital and at Burnaby General hospital have taken action this week to protest what they claim arebudget cuts.

Hanson said staff at Glengarry walked off the job Tuesday complaining about inadequate food, unsanitary kitchen conditions and a lack of nurses.

He said hospital administrator Jack Howard had stated he was having difficulty getting supplies and staff had been reduced by six or seven because of government cuts.

McClelland said the government has allocated an extra $25 million for hospitals for wages, supplies and services.

Staff members of Burnaby General Hospital spent their lunch hour Wednesday picketing the hospital’s admissions entrance protesting recent cuts they said resulted in layoffs and curtailment of new programs.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), the former health minister, said the situation was “the ultimate irony.”

“The minister said today there are no problems, no cutbacks, and yet every hospital in the province — with a few exceptions — is having the same kind of trouble that they are having at Burnaby General.”

AEC chief blasts ‘horror stories’

TORONTO (CP) — The nuclear industry, on the defensive in recent months because of criticism about the safety of nuclear energy, sprang back this week with a vigorous campaign to tell its side of the story.

Jon Jennekens, chairman of the Atomic Energy Control Board, addressing 700 members of the Canadian Nuclear Association, blasted the media saying they had created horror stories about the nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania.

He said the news media alarmed millions of people “with nuclear horror stories based on misinformation and misunderstanding.”

Although Jennekens said the media faced difficulty in acquiring accurate information, “much of the coverage which ensued went well beyond the bounds of objectivity and credibility.”

The conference, given the theme title The International Challenge began less than 10 days after thousands of anti-nuclear demonstrators around the world marched on nuclear power plant sites protesting against atomic energy.

Bob Taylor, chairman of Ontario Hydro, said the greatest challenge facing the nuclear industry was to convince society that nuclear power is still a safe and environmentally rational form of energy.

“To dispel the fears of an anxious public, irrational as they may at times seem to us, is no mean feat and our success will be measured by the degree which we can convince that public that they no longer ask questions that begin with the two words ‘what if.’ ”

Ontario Premier William Davis told an association dinner audience that his government would remain firm in its commitment to nuclear power, which he called an efficient and safe industry.

He said nuclear station employees are safer at work than they are in their own homes.

His statement came about two weeks after a report was made public explaining how two employees of the Bruce nuclear plant received overdoses of radiation from an April 28 accident.

The plant is about 145 kilometres northwest of London, Ont. The report also listed several violations of safety
